Cheaper Money
A Wave of Hysteria
Bank Stocks
Vicious Rumors

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1929, King Features Synd., Inc.

MONEY was cheaper for all purposes, real business, or Wall Street bargain buying.

Wise bankers will pass on to industry and business the benefit of the Federal Reserve discount cut.

In October this country sold to other countries merchandise amounting to five hundred and thirty-five million dollars, a record for the year, and for eight years, excepting two months in 1928.

In October we bought from foreigners three hundred and ninety-two millions worth of goods.

Business is good, money is cheap.

Then, what is the matter with us? Two things, a period of reckless gambling and a wave of hysteria.

Strangest among the developments of the late Wall Street cyclone was the drop in prices of bank stocks.

Banks ALWAYS make money. The people have no intention of getting along without credit or without money. When times are good, they USE a great deal of it. When times are bad, they NEED a great deal of it.

Yet the most brilliant and successful banks in New York saw their stocks dwindled in value in the recent panic of fear to an extent that exceeded the drop in any other line of stocks on the list.

Records show that since September the greatest banks in New York have averaged a drop of 53 per cent in the quoted prices of their stock. This applies to the greatest banks in the world, banks whose stocks will have an ultimate value difficult to exaggerate.

And this drop in the price of stocks came in the face of a banking condition not merely absolutely sound, but extraordinarily prosperous and "liquid."

The writer is able to state positively that throughout the whole "cyclone" only two big banks in New York borrowed from the Federal Reserve, and they are not among the biggest.

Two of the biggest banks in the way of prosperity, the First National and the National City Bank, throughout that "cyclone" maintained a condition of "liquidity" exceeding 65 per cent of their deposits. And what is true of them is true of many others.

And in the face of this condition vicious rumors were circulated, rumors attacking credit and stating that are necessary cornerstones of the nation's financial security.

There should be some way of punishing and silencing financial manipulators, as vicious and dangerous in a period of financial panic as the wreckers of old days who killed passengers and stole their goods as they came ashore on a sinking ship.

This is written by one who did not sell a share of anything in the hubbub, one whose with drawers are unwrung, as he took his own advice, "Don't gamble."

Other countries are puzzled by extraordinary accumulation of gold in the Bank of France. The French have more gold than any country in the world except this country and are rapidly approaching us in gold reserve.

There is nothing puzzling

Dartmouth Scores 18-14 Victory Over Cornell

HARVARD WINNER 12 TO 6

YALE WINNER WITH BOOTH OUT OF GAME 13 TO 0

Famous Eli Halfback Watches Mates Down Princeton Tiger in Thrilling Battle at Bowl

Yale Bowl, Nov. 16—Yale's Bulldog and Princeton's Tiger met in their 53d annual battle at the massive Bowl of Old Eli here today.

FIRST PERIOD

Hare kicked off to Lowry who ran it back ten yards to his 24-yard line. Lowry punted the ball rolled to Yale's 10-yard line where Hall picked it up and ran to midfield. He fumbled when tackled on the side line and Wittmer recovered for Princeton. Wittmer tried a forward pass which was intercepted by Greene right where the ball went into play.

Two line stabs were stopped.

Snead kicked to Carey, who was stopped on his 25-yard line. Lowry punted to Hall, who was dropped by Barfield on Yale's 40-yard line. Hall made 20 yards on a run around right end. Miller was stopped after gaining 2 yards. Hall failed to gain. Hall made 3 yards around right end. Hall failed to gain and Princeton took the ball on the 30-yard line. Lowry punted to Hall on his 35-yard line.

Dunn was stopped at center for no gain. Princeton was penalized 5 yards for offside. Snead's punt rolled to Princeton's 3-yard line where it was grounded by Painter. Lowry punted to his 44-yard line where Hall made a fair catch. Dunn made 3 yards on the criss cross.

Hall fumbled but recovered. A second fumble cost Yale 10 yards.

Where Harvard Bid for Big Gain Through Crusaders' Right Tackles

CRUSADERS STRONG ON DEFENSE, WEAK ON OFFENSE

Crimson Twice Held Back at Goal Line, and Tries at Field Goal Also Fail

Stadium, Nov. 16—Holy Cross band of Crusaders rode into the Stadium this afternoon and met Harvard in their annual gridiron battle.

Harvard won, 12 to 6.

FIRST PERIOD.

Harvard won the toss and elected to defend the west goal. Clancy kicked off to Potter, who was downed on his 33-yard line. After two plays failed to gain, Potter punted outside on H. C. 45-yard line. Clancy made two at tackle. Clancy failed to gain off tackle. Clancy punted, the ball being downed on Harvard's 48-yard line. Holy Cross was penalized five yards for offside. A forward pass, Gilligan to Ogden, grounded. Potter punted to H. C. 22-yard line.

Manfreda replaced Baker for H. C. Manfreda was stopped by Kuehn for no gain. Holy Cross was penalized 15 yards for holding, bringing the ball to H. C. seven-yard line. Clancy kicked to Wetmore for a fair catch on H. C. 36-yard line. Gilligan made three yards through tackle.

MISSES FIELD GOAL

A forward pass Gilligan to Burns failed, but H. C. was penalized five yards for off-side. A lateral pass was fumbled and went outside, Harvard losing six yards on the play. Gilligan's pass to Burns was unsuccessful. Batchelder made two yards at right end. Gilligan's attempt to dropkick from H. C. 35-yard line was short.

Holy Cross ball on her 20-yard line. On the first play Harvard was penalized five yards for offside. Clancy failed to gain, and Holy Cross took time out. Clancy stopped by Faxon for no gain. Clancy kicked to Wetmore who was run outside on Harvard 45-yard line.

ON 12-YARD LINE

Gilligan made two yards through H. C. left tackle. Batchelder hit center for two yards and Potter punted to Finn on Holy Cross 12-yard line, where he was downed in his tracks. Faxon broke through to nail Garrity for two-yard loss. Manfreda made two more and Clancy kicked to Wetmore, who ran to the Holy Cross 37-yard line before being brought down by Clancy.

Gilligan made two through right tackle. Holy Cross again off-side, making it Harvard's ball first down on H. C. 35-yard line. Batchelder took Gilligan's lateral pass for a first down on H. C. 25-yard line. Wetmore made two outside tackles. Batchelder skirted H. C. left end after taking a lateral from Gilligan for a first down on H. C. 12-yard line.

FUMBLE ON 3-YARD LINE.

Gilligan knifed his way to the H. C. 5-yard line, where he was stopped by Garrity. Gilligan made another yard through H. C. right tackle. Gilligan carried to the 3-yard line, where he was stopped by Farrell.

A fumbled lateral was recovered by H. C., saving the Crusaders. Manfreda recovering on the H. C. 10-yard line. Mason replaced Potter for Harvard.

Garrity made 5 yards off tackle before he was brought down by Myerson, Newhart replaced Gilman for Harvard. Manfreda failed to gain. Clancy punted outside on the H. C. 34-yard line.

Harvard's ball, first down on H.

Nickerson Field, Nov. 16—Boston University downed Geneva by a score of 13-0 here today.

Ideal weather conditions greeted the two teams as they came onto the field. Lineup:

FIRST PERIOD.

Capt. Tutten of B. U. won the toss and elected to defend the north goal.

Walke kicked off over the Geneva goal line, Geneva's ball on the 20-yard line.

Seaburn punted to B. U. 30-yard line, where Cooper failed to gain and Seaburn kicked outside on B. U.'s 15-yard line.

Walke kicked on first down to Geneva's 20-yard line, where Goss was tackled by Thurman.

Geneva was penalized 15 yards for holding on the first play. Seaburn kicked offside at B. U. midfield.

Walke punted to Hefley of Geneva, who fumbled. The ball was recovered by Dincolo on the Geneva 30-yard line.

Seaburn punted to Hootstein on B. U.'s 40-yard line.

Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 16—Marquette University and the Boston College Eagles renewed gridiron relations for the first time since 1924 here this afternoon, and the game is a rubber affair as the Golden Avalanche was victorious in Boston in 1923 but lost out in '24.

After rain most of the week, ticket sales did not boom until today and a crwod of about 8000 was on hand at the kick-off. The weather was ideal.

Coach Joe McKenney left two of his stars, Capt. Creeden and Mirley at home with injuries, and is replacing them with Colbert and Marr, while Chesey Antos was held in reserve at the kick-off and was replaced by Vodokolys. Coach Frank Murray of Marquette also made startling last minute changes in the line-up by sending his 216-poung right tackle, Co-Capt. Radick, to right end and Neil Gorjo, reserve veteran guard to left end.

FIRST PERIOD.

Capt. Radick of Marquette kicked off to Colbert, who returned the ball 15 yards to Boston's 35-yard line. Marr gained Hanover, N. H., Nov. 16—Under the most ideal weather conditions Dartmouth and Cornell played the 13th game of these series here on Memorial Field this afternoon.

A bright sun shining from a cloudless sky and no wind is most favorable to both teams and the 14,000 persons here for the contest.

Just before the start of the game Al Marsters, the Dartmouth star, came across the field to take his seat on the Green's bench, showing no other effects of his injury than a slight bend of his body. Marsters will return to the Dick Hall House after the game, but expects to be discharged the first of the coming week.

Unless Coach Connell sends Aarne Frigard in to replace Shep Wolff and decides to give Tommy Longnecker another chance to display his wares, Dartmouth will start the identical eleven that opened against Brown.

"Cowboy" Cole will be at left tackle instead of Hank Barber, and Charlie Nims will be assigned to right guard, although Paul Crehan has fully recovered from the injury which he received in the Harvard game.

Dartmouth Won 18 to 14.

FIRST PERIOD

Cornell won the toss and elected to receive.

Cole kicked off to Stevens, who took the ball back 20 yards to his 20-yard line before he was nailed by Bromberg. Stevens after failing to gain on a line plunge, stepped between Armstrong and Yudicky for a first down on next play.

Stevens punted to Morton on the second down and he was nailed on his 35-yard line by Rousseau. Running from kick formation Morton made three yards between Leuder and Martinez.

On the next play Morton ran inside his own right tackle for 6 yards and Wolff followed with 4 more on a reverse play. On a Soldier Field, Chicago, Nov. 16 (AP)—Before probably the greatest crowd that ever swarmed into this famous arena, 123,000 persons, Notre Dame's undefeated football team today romped out to meet the attack of the Southern California Trojans.

The bleacher seats at the extreme end of the field, although about six full city blocks from the 30-yard line, were the first to be packed.

It was a heavy day, with low visibility, but just brisk enough for the most apectacular intersectional contest of the year.

Notre Dame started its second string backfield, with Gebert, Schwartz, O'Connor and Savoldi

Tufts won, 7 to 6.

FIRST PERIOD

Bowdoin kicked off short to Tobey, who was downed on the 30-yard mark. Ingall's pass was intercepted by Chapman, who was downed in his tracks. Johnson made a first down around left end on Tufts' 42-yard line and two line rushes produced another first down on Tufts' 31-yard stripe.

Reinstatre in for Pittock for Tufts as Bowdoin lost the ball on downs. Tufts made a first down on Bowdoin's 44-yard mark.

Bowdoin took the ball on downs as two Tufts passes failed. With Foster and Stone carrying, Bowdoin reeled off two first downs

CROWD IN CHILL MORNING SEES LAME CHILD CURED AT SHRINE

WATER FROM TOMB SAVES DYING BOY

Lawrence Girl Discards Brace After Prayer at Father Powers' Grave

By PAUL WHELTON

In the nip of a chill breeze, more thousands today paid homage at the grave of Rev. Patrick J. Power in Holy Cross cemetery, Malden, and witnessed, within a short time of their arrival, two cures and learned of a third.

The first cure came even while thousands standing in line and massed 10 deep around the shrine were talking of the miraculous cure of a dying boy saved at City Hospital by healing waters from the grave.

The conversation ceased when little Rose DeLucca, 4, of Lawrence accompanied away from the shrine by her mother, allowed the latter to remove leg braces the girl has worn almost since birth.

The girl walked totteringly at first, but she walked.

Tiny arms were outstretched for balance in the beginning. Then came confidence. The arms dropped as the encircling throng murmured, she walked into the arms of her mother and was enfolded.

GIRL'S PARALYSIS CURED

The second cure witnessed by a throng was that of Raphael Reinzi, 15, of 83 Readville st., Readville, on his sixth visit to the shrine. The boy, said to have been a sufferer from infantile paralysis which has stiffened one leg, knelt at the tomb and suddenly cried:

"Oh, my leg!" Rising carefully to his feet he moved his leg and exultantly announced h could bend it. He walked away without a limp.

Edith Ellis, 9, of 28 Moreland st., Somerville, made her third visit with her mother to announce she was cured in her sleep after visiting the tomb yesterday. While she slept the girl's right arm, which had been paralyzed since birth, was lifted over her h ad.

Today in front of the chapel she made the sign of the cross to show that her arm is functioning normally.

A feature of the ever-increasing throng was the presence of eight Malden firemen from Central Fire station who contributed their day off to assisting suppliants at the cemetery.

They were John Burns, Frank Wandelear, Joseph Sullivan, John Cronin, William Buckley, Duncan McLean, Harry Moran and Michael Kilroy.

PLANE FLIES OVER SHRINE.

High up in the blue a plane wheeled came across into the wind far on the side of the cemetery Slipped down. Wires whistling Slipped across the place of sleeping dead Fish tailed, it straightened and the motor roared.

The plane became a speck in a sky innocent of clouds

Heads came down again and the shuffle in the lines resumed as the pilgrims passed forward, foot by foot, toward the shrine

Some standing in the line more than an hour The line ever lengthening, despite the whip of the chill breeze.

"Those who are well please touch the shrine and pass right along." The policeman's plea at the shrine, a plea that has become almost a ritual

Scooping of earth from beneath the slab. The many scoopings have made tunnels that appear like muskrat holes in a river bank.

POLICE KINDLY THERE

More earth. The dungaree-clad workman appears with his wheelbarrow again. Fills up the tunnels. His trips with the barrow in the last three weeks must be well up in the hundreds.

A bottle breaks Nervous hands Tears come in the eyes of the woman who dropped it on the slab.

"Never mind, madam. Get another one and come right to me." The soothing of the policeman They are a revelation in Holy Cross.

The elderly woman departs—happy again.

"Those who are well, please touch the stone and pass right along."

The line shuffles forward.

The girl who has been weeping at the shrine for 10 minutes moves away, still weeping, face buried in hands. Two women hold her arms.

She appears in perfect health. Still, there is something for which she apparently seeks surcease—for someone.

They enter a car with a Virginia license and drive away. She is still weeping.

Priests are in the throng again, in the encircling ring about the shrine. They seek no privilege to stand inside the ropes, but take their places with the laity.

A cure! The murmur runs through the crowd. There is a rush for a little boy, blonde, perhaps seven—shy.

He clings to his mother's arm

"Please, try and walk, darling. Try and walk."

Ahead crouches a man, a stranger.

"Come on, sonny. You walk to me."

The distance is two yards. But the shy boy clings to his mother's arm and casts embarrassed glance at his volunteer helper.

Not a cure yet. The boy's condition is improving. But not a cure yet. He was here three days ago. The crowd disperses—goes back to the shrine.

Do shrine policemen dream at night their experiences of the day?

"Those who are well, please touch the shrine . .."

WOMAN CARRIED THERE.

Two firemen coming in the Linden street gate carry a burden. A woman, her legs wound and wound with bandages, visible through the stockings.

Through the line of watchers at the shrine. In through the exit, with police beckoning. Can't stand in line carrying a woman.

She sits on the grave while the firemen kneel and, with her, pray. Lips moving in the crowd. She clutches a handful of earth as they pick her up again.

The earth is dry today. No mud The night's keen wind, in an ever-dropping temperature, turned into firm ground what was yesterday's morass. Ground worn free of every blade of grass for scores of yards around.

The woman who dropped the bottle of water is back again.

"In here, madam." The policeman's guiding arm, and this time he places the bottle on the shrine himself.

If there are policemen in Heaven justice must select them from Malden.

The woman kneels and is happy. She goes away with her bottle of what is now holy water.

Holy water that performed a miracle on little William Graul of East Eighth st., South Boston, dying at City Hospital with a constricted throat.

PIN FAITH IN MIRACLE

Baffled physicians and puzzled nurses still hunt for the rubber tube that was in William's throat to enable him to breathe, but which vanished after application of healing waters from the shrine

Slowly strangling from the strange malady that attacked his throat, young Graul was admitted to the hospital. Surgeons made an incision in his throat and inserted the tube to enable him to breathe.

Grief-stricken parents sped to Fr. Powers' grave. Hastening back with water from the shrine, they applied it to their boy's throat.

Billy rallied, but the tube disappeared. X-ray pictures of stomach, lungs and intestines. No tube. Puzzling.

Now Billy is breathing normally and is on the way to recovery. The hospital marvels and the throng at the cemetery marvels.

And the lines lengthen and lengthen.

"Those who are well please touch the shrine and pass right along."

BLOOD POISON IMPERILS GOOD

Washington, Nov. 16 (AP)—Physicians attending Secretary Good issued a bulletin at noon saying the war department chief had slept practically all morning and that his chance for recovery depended upon his ability to resist an apparent case of blood poisoning. The bulletin read:

"Secretary Good has been sleeping practically all morning. At noon he awakened and was given treatment. His case depends on what his own resistance can do. There is no evidence of intestinal obstruction.

"His temperature, respiration and pulse are lower. The involvement of the chest seems to be somewhat subsided. His condition is apparently one of general sepsis (blood poisoning)."

The secretary underwent an operation Wednesday for acute appendicitis.

New York Central to Retire Bonds

New York, Nov. 16 (AP)—The New York Central Railroad's proposal for increasing the authorized capitalization from $500,000,000 to $700,000,000 is necessitated by the fact that the company will need funds for expansion and for the retirement of bonds, P. E. Crowley, president, explained in a letter to stockholders.

"New capital will be required from time to time for improvement and expansion of the company's facilities," Mr. Crowley wrote, "and for other capital purposes, and funds will be required to meet maturities of bonds, of which more than $100,000,000 will become due during the next five years."

Earl of Harrington Killed in Fox Hunt

Holbrook, Derbyshire, Eng., Nov 16 (AP)—The Earl of Harrington, a great British landowner and sportsman, was killed today while hunting with his hounds. The Earl put his horse at a gate which the animal failed to clear and he was thrown heavily.

The horse rolled on him and he died on the way to the hospital.

The Earl was the ninth of his line, succeeding his brother in 1917, and owned about 6000 acres of land His heir is Viscount Petersham.

Quincy Mayor Bans Dusty Sweepers

The custom of employes of Quincy merchants in sweeping dirt from stores across the sidewalks and into the streets must stop, according to a ukase by Mayor Thomas J. McGrath today.

The mayor ordered the police to enforce the city ordinance prohibiting the custom, and warned that violaters would be fined $20.

VET DIVIDENDS INCREASED

Washington, Nov. 16 (AP)—Payment of approximately $7,000,000 in dividends to veterans who hold government insurance policies was announced today by Director Hines of the Veterans Bureau after a call upon President Hoover.

"This is an increase of approximately $1,200,000 over the amount paid in dividends last year," Hines said. "It shows that government insurance is doing what it should do—be a paying proposition."

Soviet Propaganda Story Stirs British

London, Nov. 16 (AP)—Whether recent troubles among natives in the Union of South Africa are traceable to Soviet propaganda, and if so, a breach of the Anglo-Soviet protocol signed last month, are questions Godfrey Locker-Sampson, former under-secretary for foreign affairs, has raised in the November 18.

The Times says conservatives are concerned over the alleged evidence of Bolshevik activities in House of Commons for replies on South Africa, India and elsewhere

GUNWOMAN IS SHOT DEAD BY SHERIFF

Threatened to Kill Officer Who Held Up Auto in Search of Liquor

Herington, Kan., Nov. 16 (INS)—Mrs. Louise Horton, said to be of Kansas City, was shot and killed here when she was alleged to have threatened to kill the sheriff of Dickinson county, who was questioning her and a man concerning liquor, which the sheriff believed to be in their motor car.

Mat Howard, also said to be of Kansas City, was in the car with Mrs. Horton when accosted by Sheriff Sidney Dederick and Chief of Police Arthur Calkins.

The two officers had heard a couple of bootleggers were going to be driving through Herington. The officers went to the edge of town and while waiting stopped the motor car driven by Mrs. Horton and Howard to question the two occupants.

The woman in the car said something to Howard, who started to drive off. Sheriff Dederick jumped on the running board of the car while Howard drove at a terrific rate of speed to the center of the town. All this time Mrs. Horton is said to have had a gun pressed against Sheriff Dederick.

"I'm going to kill you," the woman is alleged to have said after ordering him to jump from the motor car.

At this the sheriff is reported to have pulled his own gun, which he is alleged not to have flourished until after the threat, and shot Mrs. Horton, killing her.

Zionist Leader Speaks at Roxbury

The celebrated world Zionist leader, Dr. Schmarya Levin, will address a large gathering of Boston Jews at Temple Mishkan Tefila, Roxbury, tomorrow evening at 8:30

Dr. Levin is known to the Jewish world as one of the creators of the Zionist movement and as one of the most picturesque personalities in the East Side. Six patrolmen took part in the chase in which more than 20 shots were fired. Patrolman John J. Duffy was shot over the heart and the right side, while Patrolman Peter J. Finnegan received a minor wound in the right hand.

He suspect, Peter Delaicey, 34 years old, was shot in the head; the right side and in the left leg. Duffy and Delaicey were reported in a serious condition.

The policemen said Delaicey was acting suspiciously near a cigar store in Second ave. when apprehended.

SENATE GIVES UP PLAN TO SIT TONIGHT

Fear Tariff Sessions Are Imperilling the Health of Older Members

Washington, Nov. 16 (AP)—The Senate today abandoned plans for a tariff session tonight after an assertion by Senator Walsh, Democrat, Montana, that older members were traveling "the pace that kills."

After passing quickly on several amendments, progress toward the sugar schedule was checked temporarily by an attack on the bill's duties on dairy products by Senator Blaine, Republican, Wisconsin. Blaine asserted the greatest benefit from all the higher farm duties will go to the processor of these commodities.

"This agriculture schedule contains bunk from beginning to end," he asserted. "I am conscious of the fact," he added, "that the 15 per cent duty proposed on butter does not mean protection for the dairy people of Wisconsin. The record is that butter went tumbling down in price after the President raised the duty from eight to 12 cents a pound."

Asserting the difference in price of butter on the London and New York markets was only six cents, Blaine said this product therefore received only one-half the 12 cent duty protection.

He said the packers purchased butter from the farmer at the peak of protection and sold at a time when production was only one-half of the peak.

Consequently, he argued, the price imediately rose to meet the London price plus the tariff.

2 PATROLMEN SHOT IN DUEL

New York, Nov. 16 (AP)—Two patrolmen and a burglar suspect were shot early today in a five-block running battle on the Upper East Side. Six patrolmen took part in the chase in which more than 20 shots were fired. Patrolman John J. Duffy was shot over the heart and the right side, while Patrolman Peter J. Finnegan received a minor wound in the right hand.

The suspect, Peter Delaicey, 34 years old, was shot in the head; the right side and in the left leg. Duffy and Delaicey were reported in a serious condition.

The policemen said Delaicey was acting suspiciously near a cigar store in Second ave. when apprehended.

DRIVER DYING FROM BURNS

Caught in an explosion of liquid asphalt while he stood on top of his truck, Thomas Brennan, 181 Chelsea st., Everett, was turned into a human torch near the Malden crushed stone plant in Broadway, Malden, today.

Brennan, employed by the Tri-Mount Oil Co., was delivering liquid asphalt to the stone company when in some manner the substance exploded.

Brennan was pulled from the truck by man nearby who beat out the flames. He was taken to Lynn Hospital, where he was found to be so badly burned that there is little hope for his recovery. Malden firemen extinguished the blaze on the truck.

To Make Model of Dog at League Fair

One of the features of the annual fair of the Animal Rescue League in Copley-Plaza Hotel ballroom December 2 and 3 will be the modeling of her dog "Foolish" by Miss H Rosalie Manning, sculptor.

Miss Manning will do this "stunt" in appreciation of the league's services in restoring her dog to her after it had been lost. Home-made fudge, linens and other articles will be sold.

WHITE SLAVE WOLVES STALK CENTERS OF BOSTON NIGHT LIFE

TRICKS LURE GIRL THRILL SEEKERS

First Chapter of Crime Expose Reveals Subtle Schemes to Lure Young

The holiday season with its attendant gayeties is approaching, and the social activities of students of schools and colleges in Greater Boston are in full swing.

Nightly, theaters, restaurants, night clubs and dance halls carry their quota of exuberant youth, the majority, as a concommitant of his high speed day and age, in search of new thrills and excitement.

As a result of the revelations of conditions in Boston, which followed the slaying of Samuel Feinstein in a Back Bay hotel, the Boston Evening American is taking his opportunity of pointing out some of the pitfalls which lie in wait for unwary feet.

Despite earnest attempts at supervision on the part of parents and teachers, schoolboys and girls today are accorded much freedom from restraint, thereby multiplying the dangers which they face.

Statements of well-meaning, but uninformed writers to the contrary notwithstanding, there is no criminal type, and it is impossible for experts to detect moral blemishes in a crowd.

Modern criminals, particularly those who prey on the young people of both sexes, are as a rule well-dressed, well-groomed, and, in some cases well-educated.

CORRECT IN ACTIONS

They make a conscious effort to speak in modulated tones, and while under observation their deportment is usually correct. Their hunting grounds are places of public assembly, and they may be found mingling undetected in all classes of society.

Crooked gamblers and blackmailers have been known to operate in the most select gatherings, but the stamping grounds of the cadet, the drug peddler and the bootlegger, the chief menaces to youth, are in the cheap dance halls, restaurants and nightclubs.

This unholy trio, whose numbers and strength have grown to almost unbelievable proportions since the war, carry on their traffic in debauchery and crime with out little molestation.

There are two main reasons why these debauchers of youth are not interfered with to a greater extent. The first is that their victims as a rule, fail to complain to the police but suffer the shame and ignominy in silence. The second is that the racketeers are well supplied with money, and in consequence are able to purchase protection.

"To be sure there are occasional arrests, usually with some more or less innocent person hired to "take the rap," or because protection money has not been paid.

BIG SHOTS "FIX" IT

That the underworld pays little attention to these flurries is evidenced by the fact that during the recent white slave inquiry, cadets were found calmly following their trade.

The racketeers know that the activities of the authorities will not last, and that the "big shots" will see to it that the excitement dies down and business resumes as usual.

Too much money flows from organized vice into the coffers of the higher-ups to permit a moral house cleaning.

The bulk of the cheap restaurants which are the hangouts of white slavers, dope pedlars and bootleggers are located in the Back Bay and South End, with a handful in the North End.

Some of these places are not cheap from the standpoint of prices, and make a garish display of lights, while well-paid orchestras fill the room with the latest jazz.

Many of them do not sell liquor, but permit their customers to bring their own, obtaining their revenue by charging 75 cents for a 15-cent bottle of ginger ale. Others permit waiters to satisfy the wants of thirsty guests, or sell the liquor concession to bootleggers.

A large majority of the patrons of these places are respectable, but it is in the small and vicious minority that the danger lies.

Gunmen take their women to such restaurants, and meet on terms of equality their ilk of the underworld and the respectable element. It was in a restaurant that an attractive girl made a remark which led to her and her escort being sought in connection with the Reinstein killing. In a moment of drunken rage she said to her boy friend:

"If you don't kick back that wrist watch and ring, I'll tell what you know about the Sammy Reinstein case."

LURED BY LIQUOR

"Within the past week a woman whose duty it is to look after the welfare of young women, said of the same place:

"Every girl in it was drunk Saturday night."

The cheaper type of restaurants make their appeal through the sale of bad liquor and "needled" wine.

This old photograph was made at the time Fr. Power was stationed at the Church of the Most Holy Redeemer, East Boston, where Fr. Fitton was pastor. Fr. Fitton is mentioned often in the biography of Fr. Power in the Boston Evening American. He officiated at the high mass of requiem when Fr. Power died, and was so affected he could not restrain his tears.

HUMAN TORCH A STOCK VICTIM

Scranton, Pa., Nov. 16 (AP)—Carl S. Motiska, 58, a prominent civil engineer, was fatally burned today when, according to police and fire officials, he poured gasoline on his clothing and set himself afire at his home here. His wife, who attempted to prevent him from setting himself afire was seriously burned. The husband died in a hospital.

Police said Motiska had lost heavily in stock market speculation and had brooded over his financial affairs.

Firemen and police said Motiska barricaded himself in the cellar of his home and they were forced to break down a door to reach him. His wife was taken to a hospital.

$25,000 FIRE IN LEVERETT

Leverett, Nov. 16 (AP)—Fire of undetermined origin that destroyed the large barn and other farm buildings of Charles H. Beaman early today, caused the death of 45 cows, two horses and several swine, besides many tons of hay and all farming equipment.

The loss is estimated at more than $25,000. The livestock was valued at more than $10,000.

The barking of a dog awakened Mr. Beaman and at that time the barn, located across the road from the dwelling, was ablaze. Apparatus was called from Amherst.

Beaman is owner of the Leverett box shop and is prominent in local political affairs.

Protestant Pastor Cites Good in Shrine

A helpful reaction will result from the cures at the tomb of Rev. Patrick J. Power in Holy Cross Cemetery, Malden, the Rev. William E. Oliver, pastor of the First Congregational Church, Lynn, told his congregation at a service in his church.

He described a visit which he made to the tomb, and said he was most impressed b ythe reverence of the people.

"There was not a flippant soul there," he said. "Hope was in every eye an devoty face. Sacrifice was being practiced in making gifts in the expectation of answered prayers.

"I believe there will be a helpful reaction from these cures, as they will remind people of the power in prayer."

DECLARES U. S. LAGS IN FLYING

New York, Nov. 16 (INS)—"Europe is more air-minded than the United States."

This was the declaration of Vincent Bendix, Jr., aviation and automobile magnate of Chicago, returning from a seven weeks European tour on the Berengaria today.

"European inventors are particularly active," said Bendix, who is president of the Bendix Aviation Corporation.

"While abroad I acquired rights for a number of European inventions which will revolutionize the aviation industry."

Bendix declined to divulge the nature of these inventions.

An increasing European mindedness was observed by Bendix during his trip.

"The market gives promise of being very favorable," he said, "and we are planning to open factories at Paris, Frankfort on Main, in Germany, and Birmingham, England, for the manufacture of Bendix drives, four wheel brakes and carburetors."

Slain Woman's Body Is Found in Shed

Detroit, Nov. 16 (INS)—The body of an unidentified woman believed to have been murdered was found today in a shed by a patrolman. The body lay stretched out on the floor. There were evidences of a struggle and marks and bruises on the woman's face and neck.

After a cursory examination of the body belief was expressed that the woman had been attacked, robbed and murdered.

Arlington Gunman Is Sent to Psychopathic

Fedele Ferraro, 23, who was shot in the leg during a gun battle in Arlington with Patrolman Albert T. Zwink, was sent to the Psychopathic Hospital today for observation. His case was heard in East Cambridge Court where he was arraigned on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon and with carrying a revolver.

2 IN $400,000 HOLDUP NAMED

Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 16 (AP)—Photographs of two men with long criminal records were identified by several socially prominent Buffalonians who lost upward of $400,000 in jewels in the hold-up at the home of John L. Carson, Jr., in Snyder, Thursday night, as resembling two of the seven robbers.

Identification was established at the home of Philip F. Metz, son-in-law of Norman F. Mack, Democratic National committeeman, in the presence of state, county and city police. Mrs. Metz was robbed of gems worth about $65,000.

Police took a number of Rogues' Gallery pictures to the Metz home where several victims of the robbery had gathered. They went through the pictures and finally selected two of the men who, they said, strongly resembled the robbers.

Robbery Suspect to Be Brought Back

DENIES PRISON MUTINY FEAR

Joliet, Ill., Nov. 16 (AP)—Warden Henry C. Hill today issued a denial of published stories to the effect that guards at the new Statesville penitentiary had been doubled on discovery of a plot of prisoners to shoot and dynamite their way to freedom.

Guards at the penitentiary renewed their vigilance upon receipt of warning from a paroled convict that a plot was under way to dynamite the walls.

Warden Hill denied that extra precautions had been taken and said that the warning had been received six weeks ago, but Brig.-Gen. John V. Clinnin, National Guard commander who suppressed a mutiny at the old prison here a decade ago, said a former convict had come to him yesterday with word of the conspiracy.

2 Boys Held on Firebug Charges

Neils Christenson, 17, and his brother, Andrew, 18, of Granite st., East Weymouth, in Quincy court today were held in $5000 each for the grand jury on charges of setting fire to a building.

The boys were arrested by Patrolman Charles Coyle of Weymouth on a charge of setting fire to the barn of John Bentley, Keith st., Weymouth Landing, on Nov. 13. The building was destroyed with loss estimated at $1200. There have been 16 other suspicious fires in Weymouth in the last few months.

WORK SPEEDED FR. POWER'S DEATH

Young Priest Labored on Despite His Failing Health, Life Story Shows

The third chapter of the remarkable story of Rev. Patrick J. Power, whose grave in Holy Cross Cemetery, Malden, has become a shrine of cures for hundreds of thousands of people during the last week, is publishes today.

EDWARD HALL provides that most intimate glimpse of the young priest. The tree-lined Chicopee-Springfield rd., a dusty white ribbon beneath the summer sun. The creaking buggy wheels. The patient plodding horse. Fr. Healy and Fr. Power embarked upon a mission of duty among outlying parishioners.

"He visited the Sunday school and talked with the boys and girls."

We see Fr. Power in the Sunday school at St. Michael's, now a cathedral, the center of a group of boys and girls, always drawn to him by that bond of simplicity and understanding, imparting to his charges some measure of the bountiful love and faith that were his own.

ALL who met him were impressed by his rich faith and devotion, but it was upon the children that Fr. Power made his most lasting impression in that short service to his church before death claimed him.

And his death was close at hand, although it is doubtful whether any but himself had a realization of its proximity. He was removed from the watchful eye of his brother, John, always anxious regarding his health, and with Fr. Fitton absorbed by his increasing duties in a distant parish, the two who might have recognized the signs had not that opportunity.

Fr. Power knew. He was weakening daily. The long years of study and preparation from which he would allow himself no surcease were taking their toll. He had given too much of his body, and that which he had given gladly was probably beyond recall had he chosen to relinquish his work in an effort to bring it back. He did not so choose in any event.

FAILING hourly, his work went on. Fr. Healy was aroused suddenly to a realization that this young priest, upon whom he had come to depend so greatly, was a very sick man. He advised a rest. Fr. Power, with the knowledge that he soon would gain a greater rest than any life could bring, refused to give up his duties.

There came the day when he did not leave his bed in the rectory of St. Matthew's. John from whom he kept his illness so long, was notified at last and went immediately to Chicopee. He found the young priest beyond worldly aid.

So Rev. Patrick J. Power, on short service in the priesthood at an end, was taken home to the house in Fairmount st., Brookline. And there, on Dec. 8 1893, on the Feast of the Immaculate Conception of the Blessed Virgin, he died.

Edmund Power, son of John and at the time 10 years of age, was at the bedside of his uncle when death came. He is the only member of the family present at the time who still survives.

TWO days later the funeral service was held in the Church of the Most Holy Redeemer, East Boston, where years before Fr. Power had served as an altar boy and where Fr. Fitton first took an interest in him.

Fr. Fitton was celebrant of the requiem mass and was so affected during the service that he wept. Edmund Power, who was present recalls:

The body lay in state there before the service. Fr. Teeling, who later became a monsignor, was deacon of the mass and Fr. Lawrence McCarthy was subdeacon. Fr. Teeling and Fr. McCarthy had been classmates of my uncle. All have since died.

"I recall that Fr. Fitton was so effected that he broke down and wept during the services. I remember there were several prominent persons present."

From East Boston to the Holy Cross Cemetery in Malden the funeral cortege wound its way and there Fr. Power was laid at rest while a group of those who had been closest to him during life stood with bared heads about his grave.

Edmund Power recalls that little group against the background of the thousands that pour through the Holy Cross gates daily now, seeking out the tomb where 60 years ago a priest was buried.

FR. POWER was the first priest to be buried in Holy Cross Cemetery. Today there are nearly 100 priests interred there, including Fr. Fitton, founder of Holy Cross College, and Fr. Power's closest associate in the priesthood.

As simple as his life had been, was the notice of Fr. Power's death printed on December 18, 1889, in The Pilot, under the "Obituary of Clergymen":

"At Brookline, 8th inst., Rev. Patrick J. Power, 25 years, 2 months. The funeral took place from the Church of the Most Holy Redeemer, East Boston, on Friday, 10th inst."

(The last chapter in the life of Fr. Power, telling of the memorial erected by the children who loved him and relating a number of stories of his life as told by his relatives, will appear in Monday's Boston Evening American.)

AURA OF FAITH SURROUNDS SHRINE

Hundreds Are Made Happy, Whether Cured or Not, by Their Visits

By REV. ALBERT E. GEORGE

The vigil lights are still burning at the shrine of Fr. Power in Holy Cross cemetery. Some of them have been burning all night. A solitary crucifix is radiating its solemn message: "If I be lifted up, I will draw all men unto me"; that message awaits every suppliant as they approach the spot. Flowers are more abundant today. They sparkle with their beauty and add lustre to the scene. They all tell the same message.

A felt hat remains at the shrine today. It has been left there for some worthy purpose. It leaves a tale untold. During the night vigil some burdened soul left it. Today or tomorrow, it may be, the life that hopes to get relief will return to reclaim it and take it away. It is a silent reminder of the help that has been gained here.

Around the shrine hundreds gathered. Some have been there since early morn. They stand in awe and watch the long line of suppliants as they bend the knee in adoration. The sun is flashing its golden rays athwart a large cross near by and leaving the shadow of the cross beyond where many are kneeling. It is a moving vision of devotion.

CARRIES CRIPPLE

Thousands are here. A poor cripple is resting beneath a neighboring cross, waiting for some one to carry her to the shrine. A fireman and police officer carry her tenderly. She rises from the spot with the help of others. Her face is radiant with the experience. She is glad that she has been there. Many are resting the place resting upon the arms of others. This is being constantly repeated.

I broke away from this for a time to help a little six-year-old boy to walk. Alongside of his mother we both helped and encouraged him to take more steps. He had no use of his limbs for some time. He was doing well. Crowds circled around us. The little fellow was making an heroic effort to catch his mother's smile. When after making the effort to use his limbs for some time he cried out: "I can walk some, cant I mother?"

His mother assured me that while he was not cured there was a marked improvement in his condition. Then I went toward All Souls' Chapel to see Charles Mandretta, 10-year-old boy who has been improving constantly from his crippled state and showed the crowd that he could do better today than yesterday. I patted on the back Joseph Devereaux, 13 year-old boy of Roxbury, who always welcomes encouragement and his countenance lightens when give him the glad hand of fellowship. He is so hopeful. Madeline Pupos, a two-year-old child in the arms of its youthful mother, as she leaves the altar after having the limbs of her child and praying constantly for her little one to recover.

BOY RETURNS DAILY

Frank Goldstein, 15-year-old boy suffering from paralysis, comes here daily. He knows, at he is cured. He is lingering around the crowds telling them of his progress and encouraging others afflicted, not to give up hope.

These are a few of the money who have reason to be grateful for their experiences here. It is the comfort that they get here in this atmosphere. It is not a complete cure, it is a comfort to be in the presence of so much faith. You cannot help but realize it.

There is no lessening of interest here. It is growing. You can overhear people talking about it. There is reverence everywhere. People here are not afraid to kneel on the bare ground for hours, in proximity to the place where all are going.

The atmosphere is charged with a religious awe. It is contagious. No matter about cures. They will come anyway. But feel the devotional air here. It is thrilling and responsive to our needs.

Convention Greets Hoover by Mail

Washington, Nov. 16 (AP)—Something new in convention procedure engaged capital attention today with word that, instead of seeking a reception by President Hoover as is the prevalent custom, the Master Photo Finishers of America communicated greetings to him by mail.

The letter expressed hope that other conventions would do likewise to eliminate "a great drain upon the President's health and time."

INDUSTRIAL AND FINANCIAL LEADERS APPLAUD HOOVER'S CALL

CONFERENCE HELPFUL TO BUSINESS

New York, Nov. 16—Financiers, railroad heads and industrial chiefs generally voice approval of President Hoover's call for a business conference at the White House.

They all express confidence that the conference will result in keeping industry at a high level. Their comments follow:

MATTHEW C. BRUSH, president of American International Corporation and director in 55 companies:

"Nothing could be more helpful to the general situation than to unqualifiedly back the President of the United States. The interesting feature of this entire situation is that there has been 100 per cent co-operation between the business leaders of the country and the administration. It is very evident that the administration means to do those things which make for prosperity.

"I can think of nothing more helpful than for the big leaders in business to sit in consultation with the administration with a view of 100 per cent co-operation."

CHARLES A. STONE, of Stone & Webster, Inc., said:

"I am glad to hear that Mr. Hoover is going to listen to the businessmen of the country and learn their views as to the best method of stabilizing financial conditions. The United States is prosperous industrially and, in my opinion, the financial difficulties are not serious. I am sure Mr. Hoover's views will be helpful to the financial interests of the country."

DANIEL WILLARD, president of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, said:

"If President Hoover has decided to confer with representative business men and industrialists of the nation for the purpose of correcting whatever may have caused the recent stock market upheaval I am convinced that the plan is a wise one.

"I have the utmost confidence in President Hoover and it goes without saying that whatever his means of arriving at the facts are for the interest of the nation as a whole.

"I am hopeful that the action I am advised he has taken will be productive of much good."

PATRICK E. CROWLEY, president of the New York Central lines, said:

"I am not informed as to the purpose of the President's conference. However, I see nothing on the economic horizon that is not bright. The outlook for the railroads, generally speaking, is good, and they can look toward next year with great confidence.

"Generally, industry is in a sound condition. Inflation of credit expansion, if it has existed, has not entered into the economic structure to such an extent that we have any difficult situations to smooth out now, or that would result in the dumping of inventories or breaking price levels that would bring about a general economic crisis or paralysis."

JOSEPH W. HARRIMAN, president of the Harriman National Bank and Trust Company, said:

"If the survey that President Hoover contemplates making is not too long drawn out and is promptly acted upon, any bad effect from the recent panicky condition would be arrested. But it will take quick action and it will be very difficult to bring about good results, unless there be the quick action. Business is good, but needs reassurance. A survey of this kind must not be like a long drawn out engineering survey to have proper effect. I believe President Hoover's plan is a wise one and heartily endorse it."

Carolina Mills Go on 4-Day Work Week

Spartanburg, S. C., Nov. 16 (AP)—Other textile mills in the Piedmont section at an early date are expected to follow the lead of a dozen mills in Spartanburg county, which announced a reduction in working time to four days a week.

The action was in accordance with a decision reached here last week by more than 60 mill executives of the narrow sheeting and print cloth groups of the Cotton Textile Institute to curtail the output of that class of goods.

Breaks from Jail the Second Time

Concord, N. H., Nov. 16 (AP)—Irving Jenson, 28, who escaped from the county jail at Boscawen in 1927 and was recaptured a few days ago, was at large again today after having escaped from his custodians for the second time.

Jensen was serving six months on a charge of drunkenness when he escaped two years ago. When caught again he was lodged in the police station of Ward One in this city to await the arrival of jail officials. When they arrived they found Jensen had broken the lock of his cell and walked out.

Spanish Bus Overturns

Oviedo, Spain, Nov. 16 (INS)—Two persons are dying and 11 others suffered serious injuries today when an omnibus filled with passengers overturned near here.

Business Conference Call Highly Praised

tative business men and industrialists of the nation for the purpose of correcting whatever may have caused the recent stock market upheaval I am convinced that the plan is a wise one."

Patrick E. Crowley, president of the New York Central Lines, said:

"I am not informed as to the purpose of the President's conference. However, I see nothing on the economic horizon that is not bright. The outlook for the railroads, generally speaking, is good, and they can look toward next year with great confidence."

President Hoover yesterday expressed supreme confidence in American business and issued a call for the nation's leading captains of industry, agriculture and labor to meet with him here next week.

The conference will lay plans to keep American business booming at full speed.

WEALTHY GATHERING.

The meeting probably will be Tuesday or Wednesday. Then will be gathered, it was learned at the White House, more representatives of greater wealth, potential and real, than ever have met here before.

The President plans to co-ordinate business and governmental agencies into concerted action to ensure continued business prosperity. He sees in the present agitation an opportunity for business to forge ahead, rather than be disturbed.

Diversion of capital from speculative channels into the channels of business cannot but result in renewed constructive progress, he believes.

Building construction, railroad construction, marine construction, public utilities as well as governmental projects and state and municipal public works were listed as outlets for expanded credit.

"Any lack of confidence in the economic future or the basic strength of business in the United States is foolish," the President declared in announcing the conference. "Our national capacity for hard work and intelligent co-operation is ample guaranty of the future."

BIG PRODUCTIVE PROGRAM

The President took his action following the administration announcement Wednesday that the country could expect a tax reduction of $160,000,000 on this year's taxes.

The first step was taken following a conference at the White House with Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, Under Secretary of the Treasury Mills and Governor of the Federal Reserve Board Roy Young.

The President was assured by Representative Tilson, Republican leader of the House, that the tax cut legislation would be passed by Congress before Christmas.

"It is action that counts," the President said in his formal statement.

"My own experience has been that words are not of any great importance in times of economic disturbance. The establishment of credit and stability and ample capital through the Federal Reserve System and the demonstration of the confidence of the administration by undertaking tax reduction with the co-operation of both political parties speak more than words."

CALLS BIGGEST MEN

The President has invited to the conference the heads of most of the large railroads in the United States, representatives of the great banking interests and builders. Those to be here will include John D. Rockefeller, Jr., Henry Ford, J. Pierpont Morgan, or a representative of his firm, Thomas W. Lamont, Gen. W. W. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad; Daniel O. Willard, president of the Baltimore & Ohio, and many others.

The President made it plain that this was to be a preliminary conference looking to the advancement of great construction projects and the stimulation of international trade. Out of it, it was learned, a permanent commission will be established.

The President, it was learned, has been planning this conference since the stock market showed its first depression.

Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon and Alexander J. Legge, chairman of the Federal Farm Board, formerly of the great harvesting machine interests, have been among his chief consultants. Henry J. Pierce of the electric power interests, was called in yesterday and will be a member of the conference next week.

The industrial and financial leaders will meet with the President, Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, Secretary of Commerce Lamont, Secretary of Agriculture Hyde, Secretary of Labor Davis, Governor Roy O. Young of the Federal Board, members of the Federal Reserve and a number of government experts.

YALE PUTS BAN ON ROWDYISM

New Haven, Ct., Nov. 16 (AP)—A warning to the student body to desist from creating disturbances in theaters was given by Dean C. W. Mendell of Yale College, through communication to the Yale News, today. He said theater managers will be within their rights to call police to stop disturbances. Student misbehavior must be stopped, he said.

The incidents which gave rise to the warning from Dean Mendell have usually been in the form of excessive enthusiasm of students over the playing of an orchestra, or singing on the stage. Students join in with whistling, or voice, and sometimes with cat-calling. Audiences have indicated that too much response from the seats spoiled the show for them.

Noted Long Island Lawyer Dies at 82

New York, Nov. 16 (AP)—The death of William Bates Davenport, lawyer and president of the Long Island Historical Society, at the age of 82, was announced today. He will be buried in Westerly, R. I., on Tuesday.

FIND IRISH 'SPY' CHAINED NEAR CHURCH

London, Nov. 16 (AP)—People going to 8 o'clock mass at Collinstown, Westmeath, Ireland, today were astonished to find a man bound and chained to a telegraph post near the church.

Three notices were pinned on his clothes, reading:

"This man was convicted by the Irish Republican army for giving information to the crown forces."

And: "Spies and informers beware."

And: "Tried and court-martialed, found guilty of spying. He who releases him does so at his own risk."

The parish priest was called and he released the man, who gave his name at Patrick Hanna, a middle-aged farmer. He was suffering from exposure, but soon recovered sufficiently to relate his experience.

Masked men entered his home, he said, seized and blindfolded him and took him away in an automobile to an unoccupied house. There a band held a court-martial, after which he was taken to the spot where he was found.

DANIELS BACKS HOOVER FOR NAVY PACT

Cleveland, Nov. 16 (AP)—Two "ancient forts of folly" are being demolished by the activities of Herbert Hoover and Ramsay MacDonald, in the opinion of Josephus Daniels, President Wilson's Secretary of the Navy.

These, he said today, in an address to the Cleveland City Club are the traditional British idea of the necessity of naval supremacy, and the old American "dream" of "impregnable defense."

A third "fort of folly" lies just ahead, Daniels continued, and that is "the old notion that the seas may be monopolized by a few nations and its lanes dominated by a few big gun navies."

After agreeing upon naval parity, and to give life to the Kellogg-Briand treaty, the next step, he said, is for Great Britain and America to seek a solution of the problem of freedom of the seas.

Agreement upon this problem he declared to be the foundation of peace. He suggested that Congress enact a law prohibiting American trade with any nation that goes to war after ratifying the anti-war treaty.

"In his armistice day speech, President Hoover suggested that in war food ships should have the same status as hospital ships," Daniels said. "The suggestion was well received in America, but overseas it has not met with much enthusiasm.

"Anything that squints at discussion of freedom of the seas gets little consideration in London, inasmuch as it is not in harmony with existing war by boycott. The League of Nations countries regard it as a step in the wrong direction.

"Here at home, regret has been expressed that President Hoover did not include discussion of the London conference. He doubtless feels that, when strictly naval problems are up for discussion it is better to send up a trial balloon than to go up in one."

BANKER FACES LOBBY QUIZ IN TARIFF TALK

Washington, Nov. 16 (AP)—Chairman Caraway of the Senate lobby committee, announced in the Senate today that Fred I. Kent of the Bankers' Trust Company of New York would be summoned for questioning regarding a statement attributed to him that the Senate coalition activities on the tariff were responsible for the stock market disturbance.

Caraway's statement was in response to a demand by Senator Hawes, Democrat, Missouri, that Kent be summoned to ascertain where he obtained his information. The chairman did not say when Kent would be asked to appear.

J. H. Carroll, Washington attorney, was called today by the lobby committee to appear Tuesday for questioning regarding testimony of Edward P. Shattuck, representative of the United States Sugar Association, that Carroll had been employed to advise the sugar interests in regard to the Cuban situation.

Shattuck told the committee yesterday that the regime of President Machado of Cuba had been assailed recently and the sugar interests feared the United States might intervene under the provisions of the Platt amendment. He named Joseph Barlow as the principal complainant.

A letter from H. C. Lakin, president of the Cuba company, to Chairman Caraway of the lobby committee, which was placed in the record, said Carroll had been employed at a salary of $4500 a month.

Shattuck also said Carroll had urged that the facts about Cuba be obtained and made known to the American Government, but he did not know what had been done.

In addition to examining Carroll the committee expects Tuesday to continue questioning representatives of sugar interests in connection with their activities during the pending tariff legislation.

Fitchburg Man Held in "Smithy" Robbery

Ayer, Nov. 6 (AP)—Clarence A. Reynolds, 25, of Fitchburg, charged with stealing an electric drill from a Townsend blacksmith shop Oct. 24, was held for the grand jury in $400 here today. It is alleged he pawned the drill in Worcester for $3. It was valued at $70.

TROOPS CALLED AS MEXICANS GO TO POLLS

Mexico City, Nov. 16 (AP)—Cavalry and infantry contingents were concentrated here and in the larger cities today in anticipation of clashes between rival political elements when the nation votes for President tomorrow.

The troops were ordered to remain in barracks from today, ready for instant call, but to refrain from any action which might be construed as intimidating or influencing voters. Police and firemen will aid in the event of trouble.

On the eve of the voting political observers held it almost certain that Pascual Ortiz Rubio, candidate of the National Revolutionary party, which the late Gen. Obregon founded, would be victorious over Jose Vasconcelos, candidate of the Anti-Re-electionist party.

Vasconcelos has considerable strength in the cities, particularly Mexico City and Tampico, but the Rubio political machine is said to be one of the most extensive ever constructed in Mexico and to reach to the far corners of the republic. The Government believes itself able to cope with any emergency growing out of the voting, although Vasconcelos and his adherents have said they will consider loss as an indication of fraud and will not accept such an outcome without determined resistance.

Vasconcelos has gone to Senora, long known as the hot bed of Mexican revolution, to await the returns. Rubio will remain in Mexico City over the event. Results probably will not be known until early in December, since ballots must be mailed from the electoral districts for canvass by the Chamber of Deputies.

The election is to fill the unexpired term of Gen. Obregon, who was assassinated three weeks after he was elected to a second term in July, 1928. Gen. Calles, President at the time, was instrumental in naming a civilian, Provisional President Emilio Portes Gil, until such time as successor to Obregon could be elected.

STAGE AND SCREEN

HEAVY THE TITLIST'S BURDEN

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

THE theater still may claim among its loyal disciples a goodly flock of sturdy venerables that can remember how Al Woods, in the strident Eighties, made satisfying 10, 20 and 30-cent drama by the simple device of adroit trading in red hot lithographs. Any smart lithographer of lively imagination and a fair line of samples could always do business with Woods. At least, that is one of the happy legends of the theater.

• • •

WHAT really happened, of course, was that Woods, having a keen sense of dramatic values, could visualize a sizzling thriller if presented with pictorial suggestion. And he was never without a willing string of ambitious authors fairly itching to turn out a first class play from any good picture. Those elysian days are well behind us. While Mr. Woods created play titles, and even plays themselves, from nothing more than an artist's sketch, the fretful difficulty of this generation is to devise titles for plays already produced and running merrily ahead at good profit. Silly, you say? Well—that's the new drama.

Nicholas Young

• • •

AS all this must lead up to something, the new Jack Donahue show, "Carry On," may be politely mentioned. This smartest of the season's musical offerings, now packing 'em in at the Shubert, must be mournfully regarded as a child without a name. You see, this spirited flurry in comedy and music was written by authors wrestling with an idea and not a sketch book sample. And so, even the virtuous and high minded may occasionally slip into annoying lapses.

• • •

ALL this was discovered when "Tin Hats" was chosen as an honest name for Mr. Donahue's and Fred Thompson's joint manuscript. But a writing gentleman of some considerable standing immediately protested; the title belonged to a child of his own and he had printed documents to prove it. So, in the interest of harmony and with gentlemanly respect for copyright laws, Mr. Donahue's "Tin Hats" became "Carry On." And it's a darned good show under any title.

• • •

IT appears, however, that a misnamed child may never hope to avoid the consequences of parental misdeeds. Owen Davis, who writes plays now and then, and who has accumulated quite a library of used and unused manuscripts, claims "Carry On" as the given name of one of his literary splurges. Davis did not object so much to Donahue's pilfering, but a certain film producer had already purchased and paid for the Davis "Carry On" and there might be complications.

• • •

THEREFORE, everybody is invited to the third christening, the ceremony to take place in another week, when the piece moves from the Shubert to the wild wastes of Manhattan. On that occasion "Carry On" (nee "Tin Hats") will go into action as "Sons o' Guns."

Sherlock Has His Hands Full With Murder on Stage and 'Jack Dalton' Again at Large

ROSALIND RUSSELL

FOUL DEED'S DONE out at the Copley where you'll find Miss Russell playing in the thriller, "Murder on the 2d Floor." But the experts get down to brass tacks and eventually work it out.

MIRIAM SEARS AND HAROLD HEATON

"UNHAND ME, JACK DALTON!" shrieks the fair maiden. Miss Sears and Mr. Heaton will do their stuff in the revival of that ancient melodrama, "After Dark," coming to the Shubert Apollo.

MISS BYRON WILL be seen in support of William Gillette in a revival of his famous play, "Sherlock Holmes," which comes to the Hollis for a single week, starting Monday.

Aerial Beauty

JUNE WALKER

MISS WALKER boosts the beauty end in "Waterloo Bridge," Tremont on Thursday.

WASHING THE DISHES STEP UP LADDER

MOST of us have been led to believe that the proper approach to success is made by way of a ladder. We start at the bottom rung and "the big idea" is to climb to the top. But Glenn Hunter, who is being co-starred with June Walker in "Waterloo Bridge" at the Tremont next Thursday night, didn't use a ladder. He used stairs. What's more he didn't climb up! He ran! Of course, he stumbled over many miles of uneven, treacherous ground before he reached those stairs. Obstacles beset him, but Hunter is young, and youth laughs at such trifles as obstacles! He says:

Glenn Hunter

"I was just about the best dishwasher in New York city if I do say so myself! But even so, I saw no future in my job, so I chucked it. I got myself a position as a typist. It didn't last long, and the $6 a week derived therefrom was sadly missed.

"It was then that I met Zoe Beckley who helped me out and put me on the first rung of the ladder—I mean the stairs I had to climb. I saw one of her stories, a story about a young singer who needed an opening to prove his ability I trotted around to see her. She gave me 50 cents. I was to get a picture of myself to illustrate the article she would write. I got three pictures for a quarter and 25 cents worth of food.

"After that, she gave me a letter to the director of the Washington Square Players, and he gave me a job at $10 a week. So I was all set then, and from that time on I stuck to the theater."

SKIRTS MUST HIDE KNEES

HERE is someone who likes the long skirts and new lines. She is Rosalind Russell of the Copley Players, who has the part of Sylvia Armitage in "Murder on Second Floor," mystery drama, now playing at the Copley.

"I am a champion of the long dresses," Miss Russell declares. "I think they are far more becoming to everyone. They allow adaptability to individual needs. With the long skirts I think people look more like themselves than like something poured from a mould."

Miss Russell, brunette, and possessing a willowy figure, was born in Waterbury, Ct. Her father, James E. Russell, now deceased, was a former State's attorney for the Nutmeg State.

ONCE 'CUSSED' AT JACK DALTON ROLES, DID THIS VILLAIN

HAROLD HEATON, who plays the villain with the large black moustache and piercing eyes in the Detroit Civic Theater's production of Dion Boucicault's old-time melodrama, "After Dark," which comes to the Apollo next week, has a very interesting career behind him. He was not always an actor.

For five years, in fact, he was the Chicago Tribune cartoonist, and it was during this time he went on the stage, at the old Lincoln Theater on North Clark st. in Chicago—then a stock house playing all the old-time melodramas, in which he was cast for the "heavies." His first part there was as the villain in that old-timer, "The Lights of London," after which he played the "heavy" in "Blue Jeans," "Romany Rye," "The Silver King," "The Ticket of Leave Man," "Under the Gas Light," "The Streets of New York" and "Old Kentucky." After his engagement closed at the Lincoln, he went to London, determined to never play a villain again. He stayed there for over three years, playing in several productions, including an engagement with William Gillette in "Sherlock Holmes."

Harold Heaton

Returning to New York with Mr. Gillette to portray a role in "The Admirable Crichton," he later played with Basil Sydney and Mary Ellis in "The Crown Prince," followed by engagements with Julia Marlowe and William Hodge.

Last season he was engaged by Jessie Bonstelle for her Civic Theater Stock Company in Detroit, where he again played the villains of today's drama.

At the end of the stock engagement, Miss Bonstelle decided to put on the old melodrama, "After Dark," for the last week of her season, and in casting the piece she allotted the part of the villainous "Knatchbull" to Mr. Heaton, knowing of his early and long experience in roles of this type.

At first Heaton refused to accept the part but finally decided he would play it for a week. However, it ran for 14 weeks, and now he says that he gets more "kick" and real enjoyment out of playing the villain in "After Dark" than he did out of all the oldtime villains he played in his early days in Chicago—when a villain WAS a villain and the theater-goers of that day treated his as such, with hisses and boohs!

KICK COST HER JOB, BUT SHE HAS NO KICK

A HIGH kick lost her a job selling sheet music and got her a job in the chorus. Frances Upton, the dancing comedienne with Eddie Cantor in "Whoopee," which comes to the Colonial Monday night, Nov. 25, for a limited engagement, was fired because she didn't keep both feet on the ground at the same time. Now she gets paid for every kick. She has a portable organ in her dressing room and can play any song with one finger. She knows 48 jiu-jitsu tricks and can name the most famous criminals of the past 20 years. Her father is a police sergeant. She is an expert pistol shot.

Frances Upton

She is always in a hurry, even when she isn't going anywhere.

Everything that ever happened to her she describes as a "lucky break." She once took singing lessons, but stopped after she found that the lessons were ruining her voice.

Her ambition is to be a great swimmer. She can't even float.

Claims that she would be a vegetarian if she could cut out meats. She hasn't gained or lost a pound in six years. She never has her hair cut twice by the same person. She thinks every new hair cut is worse than the previous one. She wears a size four shoe although she has a size five foot.

Fair Enough

ELSIE FERGUSON

MISS FERGUSON comes in "Scarlet Pages," opening at the Plymouth on Monday night.

MIND BETTER THAN HEART

THE Wordsworthian formula, "Emotion remembered in tranquility," is as applicable to acting as to poetry, according to Elsie Ferguson, who stars in "Scarlet Pages," at the Plymouth, opening next Monday night.

"To remember an emotion is to remember the physical expression in which it is incorporated," says Miss Ferguson. "To remember it is to feel it intellectually, which is infinitely better for the actor than to try to feel it emotionally.

"It is one thing to imagine a tone and a gesture; it is quite another thing to express it. In the difference of expression of an identically conveived detail lies the whole contrast between one personality and another; that is between one actor and another."

THE SPHYNX OF ACTORS IS 'HOLMES'

By BEAUVAIS FOX

IF less is publicly known of the personality of William Gillette than of any other actor who has held anything like his prominence on the stage, it is not altogether due to the prolonged retirement from the footlights. Even in the period of his greatest activity in the theater he was noted for an almost grave reserve offstage. As a matter of fact the public seldom saw him except on the stage.

• • •

IT is quite likely that when Boston playgoers see him as Sherlock Holmes at the Hollis, next week, in his farewell to the stage, they will observe that same reserve of mien and action which is all that any but the favored few have ever seen of William Gillette, and yet at the same time the charm of the actor, subtle and delicate, will be inescapable. His reticence may be ascribed to several causes. First, Mr. Gillette, for years before his retirement, was not in robust health and he was accustomed to husband all his physical resources for his work. Second, he was a man of quiet tastes, a sensitive nature and a retiring disposition.

William Gillette

• • •

HE might have come by his reserve naturally, for his father, Francis Gillette, was the most taciturn of men, even in his own home—a stern man of few words in private life. And yet this father, was a man prominent in public life; a graduate of Yale, a lawyer of great reputation who represented his own State of Connecticut in the United States Senate, was an associate of Wendell Phillips and William Lloyd Garrison in anti-slavery days, and sat in the Senate on the day that Daniel Webster delivered his great oration in reply to Thomas Hainas.

• • •

BOTH in his profession and in his private life William Gillette has lived in the charmed circle of the great. On the stage he was surrounded by such Olympians as Edwin Booth, Lawrence Barrett, Joseph Jefferson, Clara Morris, Richard Mansfield. Amidst such competition of giants he made his way and held his own. His intimate off-stage were among the leading literary men of America. For many years he lived in Hartford, his home later being occupied by Mrs. George Warner, his sister, who was married to a brother of Charles Dudley Warner. Next to that stately old mansion was the house long occupied by Mark Twain, his intimate friend.

• • •

MR. GILLETTE'S present home is at Hadlyme, Conn., where he has an extensive estate featured with an extraordinary castellated mansion situated on a rocky promontory and visible for many miles up and down the Connecticut river. In this retreat are the ease and retirement that are dear to William Gillette. And it was only by virtue of strong and persistent solicitation of such friends in the theater as A. L. Erlanger and George C. Tyler—a pressure extending through several years—that he has consented to undergo the inconveniences and make the sacrifices entailed in a winter tour of the theaters of the United States.

'Dizzy' Meets His Foe Half-Way

DORIS LLOYD AND GEORGE ARLISS

SHE'S THE CLEVER spy in "Disraeli" is Miss Lloyd, but she doesn't fool Mr. Arliss one whit. This talkie is staying over at the Fenway for a third week.

Fritz Kreisler

Fritz Kreisler will give a recital in Symphony Hall on Sunday afternoon, December 8, at 3:30. The great violinist will then make his second appearance of the season in Boston.

Still in the Ring

"Murder on the Second Floor" at the Copley. (Second week.) In which a group of amiable people are made to behave disgracefully.

• • •

"Fifty Million Frenchmen" at the Colonial. (Second week.) Idle Americans in Paris turn to wine, women and song. The last week.

• • •

Jack Donahue in "Carry On" at the Shubert. (Third week.) Winning the World War with a laugh and some frisky doings. The last week.

• • •

Otis Skinner in "A Hundred Years Old" at the Majestic. (Second week.) Mr. Skinner manages to have a jolly time at ripe old age. The last week.

• • •

"Journey's End" at the Wilbur. (Third week.) If this is war, it's high time somebody put a stop to it.

'DIZZY' NE'ER INTRODUCED TO SENORITA CHIQUITA

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

IT'S a far cry dramatically from "Disraeli" to "Rio Rita." They're as opposite as the Poles set in ice at the hubs of this wheel on which we live. And yet they have one thing in common. Each in its class is first. Warner Bros. may take credit for making the top-notch talkie in which Arliss stars, at the Fenway, and Radio gets the prize for its best of the musical comedy films, now at Keith's.

• • •

THUS it is not surprising to see the two shows starting their third week today. Each theater is doing big business. Some events on "Rio Rita" call attention to about everything in this lavish production from Bebe Daniels' singing voice to the shapeliness of the chorines. This last item brings to mind an interesting truth. It is that the geographical centre of chorus girldom has suddenly moved westward some 200 miles. No longer is the Great White Way the cat's meow with a monopoly on the chorine supply. The classiest lassies for the footlight ensembles are now the boast of the land where everything is supposed to be sunkist. Why, they've even been lending Hollywood girls to Broadway for recent stage productions!

John Boles

• • •

EVERY big movie production company now has its chorus girls trim and alluring as any Gotham ever turned out. A few days ago Warners shipped East to Manhattan 30 of its choicest beauties, purely as a loan. And of the 30, so our informant avers, nary a girl had ever before seen New York. Most of them were announced as maidens picked from among the swarm of lovely hopefuls that flocked to Southern California seeking film opportunity. Perhaps that explains why folks who have seen "Rio Rita" are struck by the rare charms laid bare ty its chorus.

• • •

IT has been a striking praise of "Disraeli" that many friends, in expressing their appreciation of the sterling merit of this picture, have indicated a desire to see the photodrama a second time. One friend has seen it thrice, and says he could enjoy it again! A little girl we know, not supposed to be mature enough to understand what it is all about, has been taken twice already to the Fenway, and now, like Oliver Twist, is calling for "more." Can you beat that?

• • •

WHAT better tribute could there be to fans' taste than this! They have been crowding the doors; one night this week we saw the queue on Massachusetts ave. running almost to Boylston st. and re-curving back to the front of the theater. It is a good sign, so please, won't somebody send word to Hollywood that we all want more good pictures and far fewer flops than have been coming our way lately.

On with the show, but let the show be a good one!

Next Symphony Concert

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will next play in Boston a week from next Friday afternoon and Saturday evening, since during the coming week it will make its first visit of the season to New York.

TWO PIANISTS IN CONCERT

GUY MAIER and Lee Pattison, who will give a recital of music for two pianos tomorrow evening at the Repertory Theater, are two young American artists. Since their student days in Boston, and in Berlin under Arthur Schnabel, they have devoted themselves almost exclusively to programs of music for two pianos. These young men are, without a doubt, the foremost exponents of this field of music, and their work has brought about a renaissance of two-piano playing and given fresh inspiration to present day composers. On tomorrow night's program appears a Fantasy, "Heroical Fountains," written by Pattison and now performed for the first time. There are also numbers by Franck, Schumann, Goosens, Casella, Frantz and Strauss-Chasins.

Southern Lass Cast in Native Heath Role

Gladyce Deering, a typical Southern girl from the languid eyes to the drawl in speech, was fortunate enough to drop into a part in her very first show in which she can apply all these natural attributes. In the new musical comedy offering by Demarest and Lohmuller, "Woof Woof," at the Majestic, Nov. 25, she portrays the daughter of a Southern planter. Although this will be Miss Deering's first appearance in a legitimate production, she has had plenty of training and experience. Her entry into the show world was the result of amateur dinging for friends, her first public effort being at the Club Chez Pierre in Chicago. The family had removed from Shreveport to Chicago during Miss Deering's girlhood.

Gladyce Deering

Houghton Recital

James R. Houghton, the baritone who is well known hereabouts by virtue of appearances as soloist with various organizations, will give a recital in Symphony Hall on Thursday evening, December 5. He will be assisted by the Amphian Club of Melrose, a male chorus of 75 voices of which he is conductor. Stephen S. Townsend will be the guest conductor of the occasion.

MET'S STAGE SHOW IS FINE

MORTON DOWNEY is in his second full week as master of ceremonies, and presides over the stage band and talent in "Tropical Nights," an exotic Publix revue of merry men and maids in the height of hilarity. Featured in the cast are Harry Spear, Kellar Sisters and Lynch, a trio of fine artistes; Cecile Blair, a speedy little miss; Kambaroff, a surprise novelty; and the beauteous Dave Gould dancing girls.

The Metropolitan Grand Orchestra, under the direction of Arthur Geissler, presents "Martha," with Stella Power, soloist.

Arthur Martel, presiding at the organ console, offers another of his novelties, in which the orchestra takes part.

Paramount Sound News, and a Fashion Reel, showing the latest and most attractive hits in natural colors, complete the program. It is an excellent show, the stage production being lavishly beautiful

Austral Tomorrow

Florence Austral will give a recital in Symphony Hall tomorrow afternoon at 3:30. She will be assisted by John Amadio, flutist. Her portion of the programme will include: Aria: Leise, Leise from Weber's "Der Freischutz"; a group by Brahms —Liebestreu, Wie Melodien, Der Tod das ist die kuhle Nacht, Zigeuerlieder; Love-Death from Wagner's "Tristan and Isolde"; Strauss' "Morgen" and "Caecilie"; Love's Quarrel, by Scott; Five Eyes, by Gibbs; Rude Wind, Cruel Sea, by Glen; Alleluia (A Joyous Easter Hymn); and an Aria: Plus grand dans son obscurite from Gounod's "La Reine de Saba."

Tony Sarg's Marionettes

Tony Sarg, marionette impresario, will present his little wooden-headed actors in his annual Boston engagement, at the Tremont Temple, on November 27, 28, 29 and 30, in a production of "Rip Van Winkle." The production will be staged twice daily, with matinees at 2:15, except Thanksgiving Day at 3:30. All evening performances will be at 8:15.

Film Futures

STAGE AND SCREEN

SCREEN'S JOAN OF ARC RETURNS TO FILMS

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Universal Service Motion Picture Editor

Copyright, 1929, by Universal Service

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 16—Jetta Goudal, labeled the screen Joan of Arc during the recent Equity trouble, is coming back into the movies. Miss Goudal, whose exotic type and ability are admitted, has had rather a difficult time in the picture business. First there was her law suit, and then the advent of the talkies which threatened all the actresses who spoke with an accent, and as she said herself, things didn't look very promising for her.

But the Goudal manner of speech, temperament and what have you, are particularly suited to "China Lady" which Warner Brothers will produce as a special Vitaphone short reeler and so La Goudal now has a job. The story is of an American girl who is brought up in China and so thoroughly imbibes the Chinese customs and manners she is constantly taken for a Chinese.

Louella O. Parsons

After Miss Goudal finishes "China Lady" there are other similar roles Jack Warner has in mind for her.

* * *

HAS Johnny Mack Brown a singing voice? He must have for he is to play the singing cowboy in "Montana," the outdoor special planned by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer as a vehicle for Joan Crawford's next. You never can tell when one of our movie folk is going to come forth with some accomplishment that has been hidden all these years. The talkies have proved that we have violin players, cello players, saxophone players and soloists in our midst. Now please, dear film writers, don't develop a story with a saxophone star. "Montana" has Mal St. Clair as director and it is to be practically filmed out of doors. That's what comes of living in California where it's summer all the year round.

* * *

HARRY RICHMAN who came West for a few weeks and remained months, will be leaving us soon for a personal appearance tour of the Publix houses. His first engagement is at the Brooklyn Paramount Theater where he plays eight weeks and from there journeys back West playing all the Publix theaters en route. I have sworn I would never mention such a thing as money in this column but they do say that Mr. Richman will receive $7500 a week for his efforts. Apparently no one expects the movies to suffer from the slump in the market. In fact it has been proved that whenever there is a panic the movies do a good business, for people go there to forget their troubles and because it is one amusement within the reach of all.

* * *

I WOULDN'T say that Harry Cohn is prophet but he certainly did make a picture called "Wall Street" six months ago and then put it away. Now he is taking it out for current release and he refuses to say whether or not this Columbia number shows the rise or fall of the market.

* * *

SNAPSHOTS of Hollywood collected at random: Jack Holt receiving a sidewalk demonstration at the opening of "Flight." Ralph Graves also signing plenty of autographs. Lila Lee in a stunning purple gown made in the new tight-waisted, long-skirted fashion, getting great applause when she took a bow. Bebe Daniels and Ben Lyon enjoying a coca cola with Mr. and Mrs. Gus Edwards and others during the intermission of "Flight." Harry Rapf congratulating his brother producer, Harry Cohn, on this picture. Sally Eilers and Ruth Taylor lunching with Margaret Parker at the Montmartre. Marion Davies in an effective maroon, fur-trimmed suit with hat and bag to match at the Montmartre. Dolores Del Rio sans hat lunching with Roland Drew. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

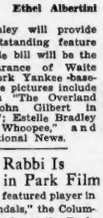
FRIVOLITIES AT HOWARD

AT the Howard on Monday the Mutual burlesque attraction will be "Frivolities." All burlesque patrons remember Frank Harcourt, the King of Nonsense." Adeline will contribute a specialty. Ethel Albertini is expected to find favor, and Adeline Parks, Margie Gerhardt and Irma Raystone are stars. James Hall, C. B. Haywortb, Johnny Cook and Stan Stanley will provide jollity. The outstanding feature in the vaudeville bill will be the personal appearance of Waite Hoyts, New York Yankee baseball pitcher. The pictures include Tim McCoy in "The Overland Telegraph"; John Gilbert in "Desert Nights"; Estelle Bradley in "Making Whoopee," and Hearst International News.



Ethel Albertini

HARRY STEPPE GAYETY STAR

IN entering the amusement field as a producer, Harry Steppe had been given assurance that his efforts would please the public. Boston will have its first glimpse at his show beginning Monday when "Harry Steppe and His Own Show" opens at the Gayety. The comedy scenes are said to be hilarious. Bud and Betty Abbott are the featured players. Francis Knight is another star, while Billie Holmes, Rube Walman and Lee Laird are others of the special group of performers who will show Boston burlesque fans the best and latest.

Dai Buell Recital

Dai Buell returns to Symphony Hall next Tuesday evening for a recital. Her program, under the auspices of the Consumers' League of Massachusetts, will be as follows: Haydn Sonata in D, a "Melody" by Gluck-Sgambati; Schumann's "Papillons"; Chopin's "Scherzo in B minor"; three pieces by Allen Coleman (played for the first time in America) Liapounov's "Leschinka," and closing with Liszt's "Sonata in B minor."

Daughter of Rabbi Is Featured in Park Film

Carmel Myers, featured player in "Broadway Scandals," the Columbia musical comedy, at the Park, is one of the few products of the theater who was fortunate enough to get the sympathetic co-operation of her parents when she expressed a desire to embark on a dramatic career. When she was still a child her parents moved to Los Angeles and it was in this city that she was reared and educated. Her father, Rabbi Isidore Myers, was a well-known religious scholar and insisted on strict discipline in his home. But when his daughter showed an interest in theatrical work he not only did not discourage here, but through D. W. Griffith obtained her first theatrical engagement for her.

VET COMEDIAN IN NEW FEAT

Going in for higher education is the latest feat of Max Davidson, well-known character comedian of the screen and star of the well-known "Max Davidson Comedies." Davidson temporarily abandoned his own pictures to play the comedy relief in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's all-talking comedy-romance of college life, "So This Is College," the picture on the screen at Loew's Orpheum the coming week.

The picture in which Davidson appears is a lilting romance laid at the University of Southern California and featuring several players among the younger generation of stage and screen.

METROPOLITAN STARS IN NEW HUB OPERA

PUBLICATION of detailed plans for the coming season of the new Boston Grand Opera Company opening Monday, December 2nd, at the Boston Opera House, has interested many music lovers and greater Boston society in general. There has been a steady demand during the past week for boxes and seats for the entire season and for individual performances.

A greater collection of operatic singers of world celebrity has been gathered together for the initial season of Boston's own company than have ever appeared here since the days of the Boston Opera Company, with the exception of the brief visits of the Chicago and Metropolitan operas.

Pasquale Amato, for 16 years leading baritone of the Metropolitan Opera Company, is engaged for 10 appearances during the four weeks. Other singers from the present ranks of the Metropolitan Opera Company are Margaret Matzenauer, famous contralto, and Martha Attwood, lyric soprano. Sophie Braslau, who will make her first Boston appearance as Carmen, has also been one of the prominent singers of the Metropolitan.

Anne Roselle, formerly of the Metropolitan, arrives from Europe with the praises of the audiences in her ears for her brilliant performances of Puccini's "Turandot" at Dresden and La Scala. Her tremendous success in the role at Dresden caused Tuscanani to engage her immediately for the part at La Scala. Another La Scala product is Giuseppe Radaelli, leading dramatic tenor, who will be heard five times in the first two weeks.

Of particular Boston interest are the scheduled appearances of Dorothy Speare, famous novelist, short story writer and soprano prima donna. Miss Speare will make her first appearances in "La Traviata" on Tuesday, December 3rd, and will appear in the role of Manon on Saturday afternoon, December 14th.

EICHHEIM IS GUEST AT SYMPHONY

By MOSES SMITH

THERE are only three numbers listed on the program for the Symphony concerts of this week, yet the music-making does not cease until two hours and ten minutes after it has begun. Nor is this long program tiresome, for each of the numbers had a special interest for the listener.

There are two novelties—Spohr's "Notturno for Wind instruments and Janissarics Music," over a century old, and Eichheim's two Oriental pieces, "Java" and "Burma," heard under the composer's direction, for the first time in Boston. The second half of the program is devoted to Strauss' "Symphonia Domestica," which rather completes a Strauss Festival" begun with "Till Eulenspiegel" last week.

Spohr's music proved to be simple, quaint and charming. The instrumentation is not ingenious, for the composer does not single out each instrument with scrupulous regard for its possible timbres, yet the very combination of wind instruments alone is enough to give unusual color. This music is primarily entertaining, with an occasional flair for virtuosity, as in one clarinet roulade, which was brilliantly played by, we assume, Mr. Hamelin.

* * *

The Cosmopolitan Opera Company presented Verdi's "La Traviata" at the Arlington last night. A large audience heard and witnessed one of the best performances of the week. With Emily Day as a generally sweet-voiced Violetta, Ugo Martinelli in fine form for the lyric role of Alfredo, and the admirably reliable artist, Mario Valle, as the elder Germond, the audience was assured of good singing in the three all-important parts.

Myron C. Taylor Calls It Absurd to Sell Steel

Earnings Shown by Many Stocks; Financial Air Much Clearer

By B. C. Forbes

B. C. Forbes

NEW YORK, Nov. 16—Myron C. Taylor, chairman of the Finance Committee of the U. S. Steel Corporation, and extremely influential in the highest banking and financial circles is not to be numbered among the reticence, but he succeeded in holding himself down to a remarkably few words during the early stages of the stock market's collapse. That he regards the trouble as now virtually over was deducible from his calm, confident attitude.

The atmosphere throughout the whole financial world was better yesterday. The old hymn, "I am nearer heaven today than I have ever been before," was recalled to my mind by a remark made by Thomas W. Lamont, chief Morgan partner, in a chat after Wednesday's very weak close. "I like the situation better tonight than I did last night," he remarked with a smile, "because we are five points nearer the bottom than we were last night, without any trouble having broken out." It is under the aegis of Mr. Lamont the Big Six have been functioning.

The widespread feeling in high circles last evening was that the tidal wave of selling had spent its final force on Wednesday. By yesterday morning all the mischievous blah about a change in the chairmanship of the National City Bank had blown over. The connecting of Owen D. Young's name with that rumor was most distasteful to him—"too absurd for me to dignify with any formal denial," as Mr. Young expressed it to me.

• • •

Feeling confident during the bearish excitement of Wednesday that many stocks had become investment bargains, I asked one conservative Stock Exchange firm (Paine, Webber & Co.) to prepare tables giving the salient facts and figures about representative stocks in each group. Here they are. The reader, when considering the yield shown, must take into account in each separate case whether other than cash dividends—that is, stock or extras—have been included:

The Cloth and the Tailor

Good cloth cannot make a good tailor; neither can a good tailor make good cloth. But good cloth is so essential to the good tailor that the two are generally found together.

When you see the Ram's Head guarantee on a suit you know that the cloth is good and you can therefore feel assured that the tailoring is equally high in quality.

Look for the label on the suit—the guarantee is on the label.

Attempt to Stop Guerilla Warfare on Stocks Praised

By W. S. COUSINS

NEW YORK, Nov. 16—In the space of three weeks, America's money and credit problem has apparently disappeared. Instead of high rates on call and time money in the speculative markets and stiff charges for commercial paper and banking accommodation over the year-end, there is likely to be an easy money period that will stretch well into 1930.

The Reserve Board's report on brokers' loans showed an additional shrinkage of $710,000,000 in the volume of credit employed directly in the security markets. Added to the enormous declines of the past two weeks, this makes a total decrease of $2,462,000,000 in the aggregate of "loans against securities" advanced by Reserve Bank members only. The stock exchange's complete compilation covering the same period will show a three-billion dollar shrinkage or close to 35 per cent of the peak aggregate.

Like the bleeding process resorted to in the olden days for body purification of all kinds, the suffering to the patient has been great. The economic physician has employed the anesthetic, figuring that bleeding to the patient was an important part of the corrective process. The administration fathers at Washington, hastening to assure us that there was no emergency whatever, made it plain that the readjustment in the stock market must be allowed to take its course.

So far, so good. Uninformed investors and speculators who pay too much for stocks must expect to find them squirming in their fingers—that is, after they have passed through their first real depression, as many have been doing in the last two weeks.

Savage bears raids on the market are quite another matter, and for the second time in financial history stock market theorists have had to revise their views on this important branch of speculative activity. Normal short selling applied as a corrective to unwarranted sky-rocketing of speculative stocks fulfills a useful function, but organized warfare against security values, with the aid of fear-propaganda of all kinds, belongs in the category with poisongas and stabbing in the back.

The investing public owes a debt of gratitude to the stock exchange governors for their effective measures to ferret out and expose those who have been engaging in guerrilla warfare against prime investments in the hands of millions of small investors from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Hammering of the stock list, dislodging margin holdings of speculators, has resulted directly in the loss of millions of dollars to thrifty investors.

Unable to comprehend the significance of the panicky drop in prices, these investors unloaded at the best prices obtainable, in many cases but a small proportion of actual cost. The unfortunate part of the whole business is that there was no legitimate reason for the sacrifice in many of their holdings, measured by the yardstick of corporation earnings, dividends, equities and future prospects.

As has been pointed out, the lessons of practical investment acquired over a 10-year period, and backed up by satisfactory experience in the buying and selling of corporation stocks, have been wiped into the discard by the speculative landslide of the last two weeks.

Though the effect of the two-and-a-half-billion-dollar increase in brokers' loans may not be immediately apparent in the stock market, there can be little doubt that over a period of a month or two it will be an important factor in buoying prices upward. The aggregate of $4,172,000,000 is $500,000,000 less than a year ago and $2,532,000,000 below the peak of October 2.

Analyzing the brokers' loan statements this week, it will be seen that each of the three contributors to the total amount withdrew a portion of their loans. The New York city banks' quota came down $364,000,000; the out-of-town banks' contribution $151,000,000 and corporation or bootleg loans shrunk $195,000,000.

The cut in brokers' loans in the last three weeks has gone to the heart of the inflation trouble, squeezing the water out of highly inflated issues and bringing high grade investment stocks to an attractive price level. The ground work for a new bull market has been securely laid.

EXPORT TRADE OF U. S. UP

Washington, Nov. 16 (INS)—American foreign trade in the first 10 months of 1929 exceeded that of last year by $590,000,000, the commerce department announces.

During this period exports amounted to $4,374,261,000, a gain of $266,661,000 and imports $3,752,060, an increase of $326,598,000. The favorable balance of trade was $622,192,000.

The net import of gold amounted to $262,658,000. Gold continued to pour into the country during October when the excess of imports over exports amounted to $17,516,000. Merchandise trade also was heavier in October.

"Available data indicates that the increased trade was accounted to in large part by the heavier outward movement of raw cotton, flour, meats, electrical and agricultural machinery, mineral oils and automobiles," the department stated.

On the import side there were larger receipts of rubber, sugar raw silk, copper and newsprint.

Gen. American Tank Profits Are Larger

Sept. quarter's net profit of General American Tank Car of $1,728,703 after federal taxes, etc., is equal to $2.29 a share on 752,746 shares. In September quarter of 1928 profit was $1,110,139 after charges, but before federal taxes.

For nine months ended September 30 net profit was $4,435,426, after federal taxes, or $5.89 a share. Profit before federal taxes in the like 1928 period was $2,822,747.

Investment Buying Is Again Advised

That prices of standard securities in most instances have now reached a level which justifies purchases on an investment basis is the opinion on the stock market expressed in Hornblower & Weeks' November investment review. As to the bond market they point out that the recent drastic stock market liquidation has brought a rapid change in the money outlook, the expectancy of easier money improving sentiment toward the bond market.

The review contains special analysis on Standard Oil of New Jersey, Wrigley, Borden Co. and Union Pacific. The investment department lists investment recommendations and the review also contains pertinent earnings data on over a dozen securities of specific stock market interest.

Denies Montgomery Control Is Changed

Chairman Silas H. Strawn of Montgomery Ward & Co. denies control has passed from Morgan group into Chicago hands. The largest known single holding is that of the Donnelley estate, estimated at 80,000 shares out of over 4,600,000 now outstanding.

STOCK MARKET CLOSED OVER WEEK-END

By FRANK H. MELOON
Financial Editor

Again both New York and Boston Stock Exchanges are closed over the week-end to enable brokers to catch up with their accounts. The tremendous trading volume of the past week has offered no relief from the congestion of big business. Abbreviated trading sessions, ending at 1 p. m. instead of 3 p. m., will prevail during the coming week, with the stock markets again closed all day next Saturday.

• • •

Yesterday's strong finish testified further, along with heavy buying, to the restoration of public confidence. The general feeling is that the worst is over, and there are strong hopes for at least slowly ascending prices in investment issues, with the customary trading dips, during days to come.

• • •

Retail trade will be especially interested along with wholesalers and middlemen in the announcement that $600,000,000 will be distributed to 9,000,000 Christmas Club members in more than 8000 banks and other financial institutions throughout the country within the next fortnight. Christmas Clubs growing mightily since their start 19 years ago, have been an important bulwark of the holiday trade in recent years. This year they are more important, financially measured, than ever before. The average Christmas Club payment this year is $59.50, an increase over the 1928 average. Every year has shown an increase. Boston and the rest of New England are leaders in this, as well as in other thrift movements.

• • •

The question most commonly asked in State Street these days is: "How late is the market?"

• • •

Commenting on the stock market break, the Old State Street trader sings: "Columbia rode safe through the storm!"

• • •

Crossing the crowded ferry from Levis to Quebec recently, the writer found one in every three carrying a Massachusetts registration plate. Massachusetts, the Commonwealth of thrift, holds a high place in the ranks of tourist travel.

• • •

U. S. Department of Labor interestingly points out that, as compared with Europe, America has always been a country of high wages; yet, looking back at the earliest American wage figures, they seem to today absurdly small. Letters and reports from agents of British companies engaged in colonial settlement expressed consternation amounting to distress over the exorbitant demands of craftsmen and laborers. A colonial treasurer of the Virginia Colony about 1625 declared that wages paid there were intolerable and much in excess of the sum paid to the same class of persons in England. In 1633 Governor Winthrop of the Massachusetts Bay Colony noted that excessive rates were charged by workmen on a general complaint which called for legislative action, and a Colonial governor in North Carolina complained that the price of labor was very high.

• • •

The Massachusetts colonies limited citizenship to landholders. Boston and Charlestown waived certain citizenship requirements in 1640 to obtain carpenters. As early as 1635 Lynn voted to admit two less blacksmith, and later granted him 20 acres of land, thus keeping both the letter and the law requiring that residents be landholders.

• • •

When citizens of Haverhill raised a subscription to purchase a house and land in order that a blacksmith could come into the settlement they required the smith to agree to remain seven years and would not permit him to work for any other than the 20 subscribers. In 1656 William How was granted 24 acres of land in Lowell provided he set up his trade of weaving and performed the town's work. When help was needed craftsmen might be impressed for service. But as a rule it was only in harvest time that craftsmen were impressed into private service, but carpenters were sometimes drafted to build houses for individuals.

• • •

In these early days collective agreements were unknown, nor could the individual worker set his own price. About 1630 in the Massachusetts Bay Colony, it was ordered that Carpenters, Joyners, Brickelayers, Sawers, and Thatchers shall not take above 2s (48.6 cents) a day, and 1d (32 cents) a day if they have meate and drinke, nor any man shall give more under paine of 10s. ($2.43) to taker, giver and thatt sawyers shall not take above 4s. 6d. ($1.00) ye hundred for boards, att six score to the hundred, if they have their wood felled and squared for them, and not above 5s. 6d. ($1.33) if they fell and square their wood themselves. "It was ordered that labourers shall not take above 2s 6d (24.3 cents) a day for their worke, and not above 6d. (12 cents) and meat and drink, under paine of

Air Romance, Better Than "Chickie"

What Has Happened

MARY PATRICIA DAWN, beautiful, young brunette, meets the lad of her dreams in the person of Guy Elliott, aviator. Guy is developing a perfect airplane in the plant of old William Bryce. Happy days follow with Pat and Guy in love. Then comes Barbara Bryce, young widow of Bryce's son, with her seductive lure. Later Guy receives a visit from Barbara and her young son, upon whom old Bryce squanders a fortune. Tom Burns, a workman, rages about the unfairness of wealth. His invalid son is dying for want of necessities. When Bryce refuses a loan, Burns swears revenge. He robs the office safe and is captured after a gun fight. Preparations are being made for Pat to enter college. Hearing much gossip about the youth of today, Mrs. Dawn prays that Pat will remain the sweet girl she is.

Now Read On

CHAPTER 13.

GORGEOUS and romantic things would now happen to her. She would be courted—oh, joyously wooed. Thrilling young men would strew her path with flowers. This was Pat's dream of college.

And in the next few weeks it gave vivid promise of fulfillment. She found herself riding on a sparkling tide of society—rushing off to teas, to dinners, to dances, the little one audience excited and appalling. Mr. Dickie ran errands for her, told her what shade of lipstick to use, criticized the wave of her hair, the color in her nails and was generally a most invaluable aid. She took last minute stitches in shimmery new gowns while Dickie lazed at the door, dreamily smoking and wink[illegible] at his "two women."

"I bet Pat Would n't be Les[illegible] if she was the true to Guy" suggested a golden youth whose boyish sweetness intrigued Mary already openly in love.

"Oh, could be one night to Pat. I wish I'd never done anything at all my life that you wouldn't like."

"And have you?" said the girl touched and saddened.

"Well, somewhat," the boy answered, blushing and pinching Pat's fingers. "I wish I could wipe it all out. I wish I was as fine as I ought to be for YOU, Pat."

To the depths of her pure young heart the confession stirred Pat.

When Lee's big sporting car came dashing up to the hedge and Dickie looked out with enormous eyes and commented:

"See, you seem to be a winner alright." Pat was young enough to be swept from her feet.

Came the evening of Lee's fraternity dance. Always afterwards Pat called it "The evening of the gardenias." Such a corsage as he sent! Gardenias and lilies of the valley—a glorious shower that fell from the shoulder and went clear to her waist both in the back and front.

There was a very, very youthful note: "Pat, you're sweet, you're white like these. Pat, you're SO different."

Pat didn't mind the platitude. She lifted the flowers and planned them with tender delight on her shoulder. The soft petals touched her throat; perfume came in a little drift about her face. The lilies were so delicate; the gardenias so thrillingly white.

She stood looking at their fragile beauty. And at herself. They lent a touch of ethereal loveliness to her face; gave her skin a kind of waxy radiance. Her eyes shone; they were green glowing stars. Pat ran her hand dreamily over the wave of her soft, shiny brown hair. She thought almost with pain:

"How beautiful they are — oh, how beautiful everything is!

Her mother's voice cut through the delicious reverie.

"Oh, Pat, you won't wear them, will you? Why don't you take them in the box? They'll be all crushed in that long drive down."

"I was just trying them on, said the girl, absently. "I wanted Dad to see me in all my glory. I'll run down now."

She was about to call her father from the garage, when Dickie came flinging excitedly across the patio and into the living room.

"Say, what's up! Did you forget a date? Guy's here."

"Guy—?"

"Well, look! There he is!"

Pat stood at the French doors. She was blushing and startled. Guy swept off his hat:

"Oh, you're going out?

He was staring at her fixedly; at her dewy eyes and at the radiant corsage, so white against the shimmering green satin. He said softly:

"They suit you. Pat, they bring you out. You look like something out of a picture."

"Oh Guy, why didn't I know you were coming! Why didn't you come last night?"

"I couldn't. I've been working nights. Don't be disturbed little Pat."

He went up and took her hand. She looked into his brown aquiline face, to his dark, hazel eyes. He had never looked so quiet—and never before had he seemed so lean

FREIGHT CAR LOOT FOUND IN SEWER

$25,000 in Stolen Goods Recovered After Arrest of a Railroad Employe

Stolen goods valued at $25,000, taken from freight cars in the last three months, were discovered today in a sewer cache near South Station freight sheds.

The loot, consisting of bolts of silk and other goods difficult to dispose of, was recovered by railroads and Boston police following the arrest of James Gioninni of Genosee st., South End.

Gioninni, a freight handler, was captured, police say, after he had taken two silk dresses from a freight container that he was loading into a truck. A search of his room revealed a quantity of stolen goods, according to the police.

The police forces consisted of Capt. Herbert W. Goodwin and Special Officers John Clifford and John McCarthy of Division 4, with Supt. Martin McVague and Special Officers John Boyle, John Given and William Collins of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad police.

After the arrest the officers' investigation led them to a catch basin outside one of the freight sheds. Removing the basin they found a number of articles in the sewer, which extends alongside the freight sheds for 1000 feet. They took out six more matchbasins, and searched the length of the sewer the entire find totalling $25,000 in value.

Police said the robberies were committed during the loading of trucks, bundles being dropped to the ground and kicked under freight cars for later examination. If found to be hard to dispose of they were tossed into the sewer.

Latin School Leads in Harvard Honors

Boston Latin added another scholastic laurel to her already large collection, when the names of the first year Harvard students who gained entrance to the Cambridge institution with honors were announced by the committee on admission to Harvard College. Of the 157 Harvard freshmen who won admission honors with marks of 80 per cent or better, 46 were from the Boston Latin school.

College, Factory Girls Join Hands

A group of Wellesley girls who are interested in establishing friendship and understanding with girls in industry will be hostesses to about a dozen workers from the Brockton shoe factories tomorrow.

These girls are also members of the Brockton Y. W. C. A. where they hold meetings to study the problems brought up in the Student Industrial meetings held throughout the year either at Wellesley or at Brockton.

Soldiers Hold Smoker Tonight

About 400 members and guests of the First Corps Headquarters Battery and Combat Train, 101st Field Artillery, will gather tonight in Curtis Guild hall, Commonwealth Armory, for their annual smoker.

Besides the talks there will be vaudeville acts by some of the leading performers now appearing in Boston theaters.

Edsel Ford's $400,000 Yacht at Launching and Its Woman Sponsor

Mrs. Joseph A. MacDonald, wife of the designer of Edsel Ford's yacht, christened the craft Sialia as it slid down the ways. Mrs. MacDonald is shown just before the launching.

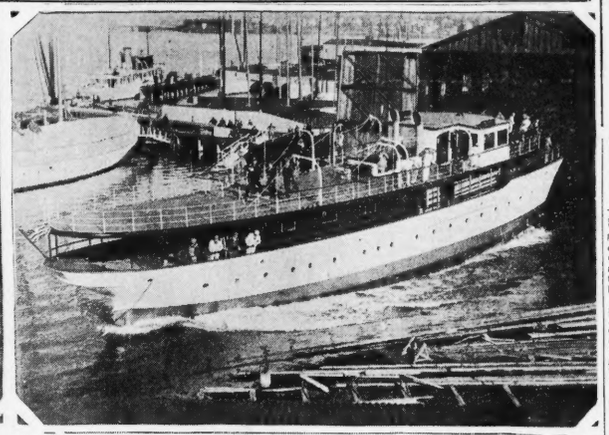

Photo shows the 130-foot yacht Sialia after she slid down the ways at Lawley's shipyard into the Neponset river. The yacht is 20 feet beam, draws 7 feet, 6 inches. It is equipped with two Diesel motors and will attain a speed of 14 knots. The craft has two double and two single staterooms, a dining saloon and a living and reading room. She carries a crew of 10 men. (Staff photos.)

Seek Hub Architect For P. O. Interior

To expedite work on the new Federal building in Postoffice sq., which is to be 21 stories high instead of 12 as originally planned, the board of directors of Boston Chamber of Commerce voted to recommend to the U. S. Treasury department that the interior be designed by Boston architects.

Under the present arrangement the exterior is being designed by a local firm of architects while the interior is being done in the supervising architect's office in the Treasury at Washington.

This action was taken by the Chamber of Commerce directors following a report by its joint committee on the new Federal building and postal facilities. A local architect is in a better position to develope and expedite satisfactory plans than another who is 500 miles away and who has to do the work largely by correspondence, in the opinion of the chamber directors.

The cost of the structure, which is to house all Federal departments in Boston, will reach $6,000,000, this being $1,250,000 more than has been appropriated. An additional appropriation will probably be passed to provide for the extra amount needed because of the change in plans calling for a building seven stories higher than intended at first.

The Chamber of Commerce committee points out that the demolition of the old Federal building will be completed early next year and that under the best conditions construction on the new building cannot now be expected until late next summer. There is danger that unless conditions improve, with respect to the plans, that the start on the building will be further delayed, according to the report.

IDENTIFY BODY OF SUICIDE

The body of the man found dead with a revolver at his side at Circuit Hill in Franklin Park, was identified today as that of Andrew F. Dooley, 54, married, of Tremont st., South End.

He was identified at the Southern mortuary by his wife and daughter. According to the police Dooley committed suicide by shooting himself in the chest with a 38 calibre revolver. Two 16-year-old boys found the body.

Police say that Dooley had been despondent since last winter when he suffered a fractured skull in an automobile accident. He had since been an out patient at the Boston City Hospital.

'Auto Abandonment' Bill Is Put on File

A bill under which fines up to $50 would be imposed on a person abandoning a motor vehicle or any substantial part of it for more than 24 hours has been filed at the State House by Representative Edgar F. Power of Winthrop.

Motor vehicle junk yards are defined in the bill and penalties fixed for establishing them without a license.

WOMAN BADLY HURT IN CRASH

Mrs. Fannie Moody, 31, is in a serious condition at the City Hospital as a result of injuries suffered in an automobile accident today at Adams st. and the Southern artery, Dorchester.

According to the police, Mrs. Moody was riding in an automobile operated by her husband, Thomas Moody, when another car, operated by Francis B. Crosby, of Howe st., East Milton, crashed into the Moody car, tipping it over and throwing Mrs. Moody to the street.

Both cars were badly damaged and Mrs. Moody was taken in a passing automobile to the hospital where it was found that she was suffering from a fractured skull.

Mayor-Elect Murphy Off for Los Angeles

Mayor-elect John J. Murphy of Somerville left today for Los Angeles where his daughter Barbara is studying to enter moving pictures. His wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Murphy, is in Los Angeles with her daughter, and the family will all return together Dec. 14.

Murphy is the first mayor to be elected on the Democratic ticket in 57 years in Somerville. He will be inaugurated on Jan. 6.

Takes Election Fight to Court

Mayor Henry F. Beal of Waltham, defeated for re-election in a recount by former Mayor Patrick J. Duane, today petitioned the Supreme court to restrain the city from declaring the Duane's election. The petition is returnable Tuesday.

In the original count Beal was given a lead of one vote. The recount gave Duane a plurality of 12.

Edsel Ford's $400,000 Yacht Is Launched

Christened "Sialia" by Mrs. Joseph A. MacDonald, wife of the designer, the $400,000 yacht owned by Edsel Ford, son of Henry Ford, automobile magnate, was launched today at the Lawley shipyard, Neponset.

The christening and launching was attended only by a few guests and officials of the Lawley Shipbuilding Corporation. The guests included Mr. and Mrs. Thomas May of Harrisburg, Pa., A. L. May of Detroit and John J. McGurie of Manhassett, L. I.

At a signal from the designer the 130-foot craft gracefully slid down the ways, sending a spray of water over her bow as it cut its way into the Neponset river.

The yacht is one of the most beautiful that has been sent down the Lawley ways in several years. It has a beam of 20 feet and a draught of 7 feet, 6 inches.

Equipped with two Diesel engines generating 300 h.p., it has a cruising radius of 3000 nautical miles. It can maintain a speed of 14 knots.

The craft is equipped with three double and two single staterooms, a dining saloon and a living and reading room. Four life boats are mounted on the main deck. The "Sialia" will carry a crew of ten men.

SIX GOVERNORS TO SPEAK HERE

The fifth New England conference, "economic parliament," of the six New England state, will meet here Thursday and Friday of next week, Nov. 21-22, under the auspices of the New England council.

Governors of all six states will be present and a record-breaking attendance of business men is expected. Nationally known speakers will be heard and group conferences will devote themselves to questions of industry, agriculture, recreational development and community development.

The leaders of New England industry, agriculture and commerce will assemble for their first session on Thursday afternoon. State conferences will follow that evening, group conferences will be held on Friday morning, and the final general session, beginning with a luncheon of the entire conference attendance, will take place on Friday afternoon.

This will be the first time the New England Conference, constituent body of the New England Council, has met in Boston. Other sessions have been held in Worcester, Hartford, Springfield, and last year in Portland.

WARNER MEETS GIRL WINNER

Atty.-Gen. Joseph E. Warner, representing Governor Allen, today greeted Miss Catherine McNair of Gloucester, winner of the Miss Cape Ann contest staged by the Gloucester Post of the American Legion.

Accompany Miss McNair were her mother, Mrs. John V. McNair, Francis McDonald and John Smith, commander and vice-commander of the Gloucester Post; Theodore Waters, Henry Johnson and Alfred Thomas.

POSTOFFICE OFFICIALS STOP MAIL

Enticing Circulars Sent to Hundreds Here From Amsterdam

Branding the "Credit Continental—Amsterdam" and the "Credit Hollandaise" as fraudulent foreign organizations operating a get-rich-quick scheme rivaling that of Charles Ponzi, postoffice officials announced today that all mail matter to or from these concerns would be returned to the senders.

For more than a month, according to Chief Postal Inspector Park D. Colvin, the officials of the postoffice department have been conducting a rigid investigation into the two companies and this investigation has disclosed that their plan to "make money without money" is not possible.

In an official postal bulletin today employes in the postoffice were instructed to stop the progress through the mails of any letter that might be forwarded to either company, in Amsterdam. Such mail matter is to be stamped fraudulent and if the sender's name is upon the letter or package it is to be returned to the address given. Otherwise this mail matter will go to the dead letter office in Washington to be destroyed.

Money order clerks have been cautioned not to issue or cash any money order checks made out by or to these new organizations.

The plan to operate such a scheme became known a month ago when circulars were sent through the mail to hundreds of persons in Greater Boston.

The scheme as outlined in the circular called for the advancement of 41 cents with the promise that it would yield $820 after the two companies were organized.

TOW HUB SHIP BACK TO PORT

With two hatches stove in and her deck badly damaged, the Boston-bound steamer Volumnia was convoyed back to London today, after her SOS yesterday called the steamer Beaverford alongside.

Furness Withy & Co., Ltd., Boston agents for the ship, received word today that the Volumnia was battered by the sea for two days on her trip from London.

When the hatches buckled, 300 miles off the coast of Iceland, the Volumnia sent an SOS. A Dutch tug was sent to the scene, but the British steamer Beaverford, bound from Montreal to London, hove in sight and lashed on to her for the trip back to England.

The message failed to report any injuries to the crew.

The Volumnia was making her first trip to this port. She had a full cargo of china clay.

1200 Teachers Take Extra Course

With the opening of an extension course in history at Keene, N. H., the Harvard-Boston University courses have reached the largest total which they have ever known, Prof. John J. Mahoney, director, has announced from the B. U. School of Education.

This year with a total of 15 courses in operation in three states, the Harvard-Boston University service is carried to nearly 1200 teachers who are actively engaged in the teaching field.

Million Less Pounds of Turkeys on Ice

Although total stocks of frozen poultry in cold storage November 1 were greatly in excess of supplies on the same date a year ago, the stocks of cold storage turkeys were approximately 1,000,000 pounds less, according to the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, United States Department of Agriculture, today. The holdings of turkeys are placed at 3,714,000 pounds compared with 4,768,000 pounds last November.

Neal Approves Gas Station Permit

State Fire Marshal Neal has approved the action of the board of street commissioners of Boston in granting a license to Ben Mullen for the keeping, storage and sale of gasoline and motor oils on Chelsea st., East Boston. The action of the Boston authorities had been carried to the fire marshal on appeal by property owners in the immediate vicinity.

TWO STAR GRIDDERS

BULLDOGS FIT FOR BUFFALO TUSSLE

THE Boston Bulldogs have just completed a week of the most strenuous practice in preparation for their game tomorrow with the Buffalo All-Stars at Braves Field.

Buffalo is expected to resort to an open game and Coach Dick Rauch of the local eleven has been busy perfecting a defense for this type of attack.

Injuries beset every football team, but in some instances they proved a blessing in disguise. Such is true as regards the Bulldogs. When, because of injuries to regulars, two staunch linemen were discovered in the persons of Shockley and Connor, tackle and guard, respectively.

These men are giants, each standing six feet three and weighing well over 200 pounds. Much is expected of this pair in Sunday's game.

BROWN TACKLES NORWICH

Providence, R. I., Nov. 16—Norwich, returning to the Brown schedule after a two years' absence, will meet the Browns today in a game that should permit the use of the local utility men for the first time this season.

Coach McLaughry's men have been through five successive major games, and in that time have had no opportunity to try new combinations or to use individuals who had not been previously proven by varsity experience.

Hub Park Commissioner Watches Son in Stadium

Park Commissioner Long was one of the most ardent Holy Cross rooters at the Stadium today. There was a reason. There's a big husky kid, one Robert Long, on the Purple squad. He's the commissioner's son, and, naturally, pride and joy. He was due to see plenty of action against Harvard, so papa was on hand early.

Bob is a guard and a good one. He prepped at B. C. high, and several of the experts had him on the all-interscholastic team two years ago, when he was playing the backfield.

Bob is in the first line of reserves at Worcester and has showed enough this fall to make his pere believe he has an all-America heir.

Waltham Eleven to Play at Portland

An inter-state football game that will attract wide attention will be played tomorrow afternoon at Fort Williams, South Portland, Me., when the Waltham Nighthawks will meet the Fifth Maine Infantry eleven.

Favor Missouri to Beat Violet

New York, Nov. 16—Missouri University's Tigers arrived in town and took a brisk workout at the Yankee Stadium in preparation for their intersectional game with New York University this afternoon.

The Tigers are favored to win the game and reverse last year's verdict. The N. Y. U. team is subnormal, because of injuries.

WOODSIES CLASH WITH WHALERS

THE Woodsies will play the New Bedford Whalers today at New Bedford in what is reported to be their last contest, news coming from Fall River that the Hub eleven will disband after the game.

The report is not authentic, however, and there is more than a possibility that Boston will continue to be represented in the new league which is complete since the New York Giants and Halloch joined the fold this week.

Last fall, though having the worst team in history, the Woodsies lost most of their patrons and the men behind the club threw up the sponge. With the soccer war on, it was policy for the American League to hold a team in this city, and Sam Marks, owner of the Fall River eleven, was given the franchise, which he still holds.

The settlement of the war, however, brought the clubs under the power of the United States Soccer Association and that body rules, that a person can own only one club.

Selling the Woodsies outright would mean bring the Fall River owner much money but by selling most of the players and holding a choice few for his own club, he would profit greatly. Whether the U. S. S. A. will stand for this is yet to be learned.

The coming week, however, will bring a decision and Hub fans will know just what is in store for them.

With the Woodsies away, the fans will have a chance to look over the simon pures as Boston Celtics and Norwegians play a Boston and District League game out at North Brighton today.

Whittalls and Morgans, two Worcester teams, will meet today at Worcester

Hub fans will be taken care of tomorrow for the Lusitania Recreation is carded to clash with the Forresters of Bridgeport at Blake field, East Cambridge, in a National Cup tilt, and the Fore River and Whittalls meet at Quincy in a State League match.

Harvard Soccer Games

There will be two Harvard soccer games on the field behind the business school in Cambridge today. The varsity eleven will take on the Brown booters at noon and the freshmen will meet Bradford-Durfee on the same field at 2 p. m.

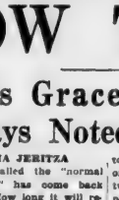
HOW THE NORMAL WAISTLINE AIDS BEAUTY

Lends Grace to Figure, Says Noted Expert

By MARIA JERITZA

WHAT is called the "normal waist-line" has come back into fashion. How long it will remain fashionable is another matter. For certainly, a cross-line snugging just above the hips is extremely trying to any but a perfect figure. Many women are slightly short-waisted and if, in addition to that, they are the least bit plump, frocks with the normal waistline may give them the appearance of a caricature.



Maria Jeritza

Uncomfortable boning and nipped-in waists will doubtless be tabooed by the modern woman because she likes clothes that are comfortable and healthful. The wasp waist is a style that has disappeared, let us hope, forever.

The chances are, women who are beautifully proportioned, and for that reason can stand trying fashions, will adopt the new waistline in all their costumes and look lovely. But the stout, short-waisted woman will, if she is clever, drop her waist-line just the least bit below normal, to a location where, as her full-length mirror assures her, it is becoming—if not flattering.

The placing of the waist-line is really the making of the figure, and the misplacing of it even by an inch or two can transform a graceful, well-proportioned woman to a grotesque object. A broad belt or sash always cuts the body in two, seemingly, adding to its appearance of thickness and stoutness.

But even though you drop your waist an inch below normal you will need to develop its suppleness and rounded symmetry in order to look your best in the new frocks, and that means exercise and a moderate reducing diet if you are overweight.

To be careful about her diet and eliminate fattening foods to a great extent, is not a hardship to the average woman. We all became accustomed to self-denial when the boyish figure was in vogue. Without attempting a starvation diet, eat less than you have of everything, and give up nibbling between meals. Also eliminate for a time sweets, potatoes and white bread. Some dietitians recommend eating one piece of candy just before each meal because the taste of sugar lessens the appetite. The plan may be worth trying.

Practice gymnastics designed to make supple the muscles of your waist and sides. Here is an excellent exercise for the purpose.

Stand straight with your weight over the balls of your feet. Now place your hands on your hips, fingers facing back and make a deep lunge straight ahead with your left leg. Holding this position, twist your waist as far as you can to the left, then the right. Finally, return to first position and alternate by lunging as far ahead as you can with your right leg and twisting your waist to the left and right. Repeat the exercise 10 times each morning before your bath.

Keep your figure firm, supple and slenderly rounded at waist and hips if you would look well in your new ensemble.

and strong. A kind of dark glory about him.

"Pat, walk down to the hedge with me. You have time, haven't you? Say good-bye before you go." He still held her hand and now drew her.

She gave one quick little glance to her green satin slippers and followed.

They crossed the dark patio. They came to the hedge—to that little grove of trees.

"Pat," said he, reaching for her other hand and turning her to him. "Do you know how beautiful you are tonight?"

She glanced up to him, seeking him with a little touch of fear. "Why are you so solemn? Guy, you seem not yourself."

Her face with their extraordinary emerald eyes, glowed in the moonlight. She had her hair parted on the side and it went rippling in shiny waves that left her small ears half exposed. She looked almost pitifully young with that round, smooth forehead, the small lilied nose and those curved, half-parted lips.

"Ann you, Pat, seem more than yourself. You're heightened. Tell me—I wish you'd tell me. Is he THE ONE—the great ONE? And you've found him already?"

She reached up and touched the scar on his forehead. As though she were in a dream, she drew his face down and kissed the red mark. She said softly, slowly:

"No. He's not the one."

He kept his head lowered a moment. All at once he gave a queer laugh. He said in an oddly shaken voice:

"I don't want to muss you. Oh, Pat, dear——"

He slipped an arm about her and drew her so close that she felt the beating of his heart. He kissed her—he seemed drawing her breath and her soul. Then he murmured:

"Now, I've marked you forever, Pat. Your lips are mine."

She had her two hands in his and held against him. And she stood there quiet, her eyes closed and felt her whole being flowing out in light—in a great flowing light to him.

"Go in now, Pat, dear."

"No, I'll wait and wave you goodby."

Long after his car had vanished down the road, Pat stood there in a dream. She wished the shadows would close about her—wished Guy would return and the shadows would close them in—like this—always.

Guy drove quickly. He went back to his workroom. He whistled and Jim came up and licked his hand. He said with a deep, harsh breath:

"We did it, Jim. We had no right to—but we did it."

"I love her," he said softly. . . .

And when the dog, hearing his voice, came up and rubbed his nose against Guy's knee, he reached down with a laugh and repeated:

"I love her, Jim!"

After a long while he turned to a letter on his table. It was from William Bryce:

"Guy—I've not been out to the plant, as you know. This building has been keeping me busier by far than I expected. It will be a month or two before I've really gotten out from under. I think it best that we hold back a little on the plane."

"He's in deep on this fool residence park," Nancy Brack had informed Guy, "and real estate's gone into a slump. You're lucky, Guy, if he doesn't close down on you altogether."

Guy took the letter and put it in his pocket. "I'll make the grade—I've got to make the grade."

He looked at a flower that lay on the desk before him—one of the lilies—she had broken off the lily and given it to him. He smelt it—he laughed and pressed it to his lips. Then very carefully tucked it in his vest pocket.

Pat was his—Pat and the little fragrant lily.

Listen, World!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

HERE'S a sentence to chew over: "HIS MIND NEVER MASTERED HIS FEELINGS."

That sentence was written by Professor Walter B. Pitkin, of Columbia University, in an article about Woodrow Wilson in which he shows the inner agony of that strangely defeated life . . . a life defeated not by outward circumstances but by disorder within the man himself. Woodrow Wilson had a great mind, a splendidly trained. But great as it was that mind was never able to control his turbulent feelings. And his feelings spoiled life for him.

Elsie Robinson

It will help you a lot to think about that distinction between "mind" and "feelings" and the conflict that goes on forever between those two departments of your life THOUGHT and EMOTION, two czars squabbling for the one empire. With emotion grabbing the throne nine times out of ten. And there's reason for that.

It is not easy to THINK. Man hasn't been THINKING very long . . . he still does it clumsily, inadequately. But it is easy to FEEL, for we've been FEELING since life began. Nine-tenths of our time is spent in feeling. A scant one-tenth is spent in thought. But one honest thought is worth a million feelings.

It isn't easy to tell the difference between feeling and thought. Many of us don't know that there is any difference. We flatter ourselves that we have strong ideas on various subjects but very often they're not "ideas" at all—but simply camouflaged emotion. Prejudice isn't THOUGHT—suspicion and superstition aren't THOUGHT. They are FEELINGS—the various fruits of hate and fear.

PEOPLE WHOSE LIVES ARE SWAYED BY THEIR EMOTIONS HAVE NOTHING WHATEVER ON WOODCHUCKS. The man who takes cover in his intolerance is exactly on a par with the woodchuck that takes cover in his hole.

ONLY THOSE WHOSE THOUGHTS HAVE MASTERED THEIR FEELINGS ARE TRULY HUMAN . . . TRULY GROWN UP . . . TRULY CIVILIZED.

Every time you are mastered by your hate, your fear, your greed or resentment or egotism, you drop back a million years in human evolution. Every time you THINK A THING OUT instead of FEELING IT OUT you advance a little further from the jungle.

That doesn't mean that thoughts should eliminate feelings. Much that is finest in life springs from noble emotions. But even the noblest emotion will run amuck unless governed by thought.

Pity's a grand thing, but it will make a fool of any man unless harnessed by intelligence. Love's a beautiful attribute, but a warm heart without a cool head is a pest. Pride makes conquerors, heroes and saints . . . and also unmakes them.

Want to try an interesting experiment? Keep tab on yourself for just one day and see how often you THINK . . . how often you FEEL. You'll be amazed! And maybe you'll understand better why Mr. Darwin pigeon-holed Grandpa with the monkeys.

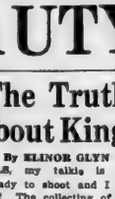
The Truth About Kings

By ELINOR GLYN

GIRLS, my talks is almost ready to shoot and I am so excited! The collecting of artists and extras has, as I told you before, been an interesting study in human character.



Elinor Glyn

The higher the talent, the more easy they are to direct, and the fewer airs and graces they exhibit. The really clever ones are the simplest and most charming people possible. But this is the same with all vocations—even the vocation of being a King!

I have known a number of Kings in my long life, and I do not remember one with rude or arrogant manners, or a disinclination to learn new things.

The King of Spain is the most humble-minded, gallant gentleman; the King of Denmark, simplicity and courtesy personified to offer only two examples.

They why should anyone who obviously cannot know the subject he is boasting about, show such lack of sense! Have you not noticed this, Gracie and Maud, among your friends?

Some will try to "put it over" with the monkeys, girls, know far more really, but only are too well-mannered to be rude.

But don't be discouraged at the momentary success of these silly people. The liars, the deceivers, the boasters and the corrupt-weeks, are all taken care of by fate, as it does you who are good.

Each one receives again what he or she has sent out.

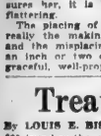
Treatment of Jaundice

By LOUIS E. BISCH, M.D., Ph.D.

IN jaundice the skin and the mucous membranes are discolored by the bile pigment. The bile pigment penetrates the body tissues in this way because the flow of the bile from the gall bladder into the intestines is blocked.



Dr. L. E. Bisch

Jaundice, therefore, is a symptom and not a disease or cause, of and by itself.

Many conditions may clog the bile duct and cause absorption of the bile. Gallstones may do it, tumors in the duct or nearby, which press on the duct, may be responsible, an inflammation and consequent swelling of the duct itself may make the opening in the duct smaller and finally obliterate it entirely.

Sometimes the difficulty starts in the stomach in a simple upset condition such as might follow the taking of too much alcohol or such irritants as mustard, spices or rich foods.

Exposing the abdomen to cold seems to predispose to an inflammation of the bile duct and the part of the intestine near it, especially in those who have had previous attacks. It is well for such persons, therefore, to guard against sudden exposure, especially in the spring and fall months when changes in the weather are common.

The presence of jaundice is easily detected when the disease has advanced somewhat and the skin and eyeballs of the patient look the typical lemon-yellow color.

But before that the condition has been slowly developing, perhaps without the patient noting that anything is amiss.

In more severe cases, the skin may turn to a deep olive-green or even to a bronze hue. Usually, there is no temperature, but often the bowels are blocked, is somewhat below normal. The pulse is slow. Appetite disappears early and the patient begins to feel tired and even utterly prostrated. Nausea and vomiting may follow. There may be either constipation or diarrhoea.

Headache is common, the tongue is coated. It may also look yellowish or perhaps brown. The breath is very bad.

Because the bile does not pass into the intestines, the stools are characteristically clay-colored.

Itching of the skin is a common and annoying symptom. Generally, the patient feels depressed, does not want to be annoyed, and prefers to rest.

A jaundiced condition may last from one to four weeks. If longer than this, it may be something more serious than a simple inflammation blocking the bile duct.

Rest in bed is the best. If this cannot be done, as much quiet and rest as possible is desirable.

A good dose of calomel, followed by salts in the morning, is advisable in the beginning of the condition. The bowels must be kept active and the daily use of some mild laxative is important.

For the first day only water should be taken. Later on a liquid diet is indicated.

Although a simple catarrhal jaundice may be easily overcome, it is always best to obtain the advice of a physician.

Parents Kind But Strict

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

ARE there circumstances which justify girls in leaving home in order to "live" their own lives? What is a girl to do when her parents have old-world theories about the bringing up and isolation of daughters which do not accord with new-world ideas of freedom?

"Dear Miss Fairfax," writes Marie, "I am 18 years old. My father is a foreigner and has quaint ideas on how to bring up daughters. He refuses to allow me the friendship of young folks, especially boys. Associating with middle-aged people is driving me crazy.

"I am never allowed to go even to the movies unless my mother is along. I graduated from high school this June, but I couldn't go to the senior prom because I don't have a single fellow.

"My parents are kind to me in every other way. They like to see me well dressed. My father is well educated. Next Fall they will send me to college, but I hate to go, for I know it will be the same thing. I will be considered the pretty, well-dressed, stuckup girl who won't mingle with the rest. That is the opinion they all have of me. I hunger for a smile from some one who is young."

I AM sorry, Marie, that you are isolated from young people. If only parents would realize that their daughters need companionship, good times and the companionship of youth, just as much as they need nourishing food and suitable clothing!

All I can suggest, Marie, is that you take advantage of the educational opportunities your parents are offering you. A good education is always a help in solving one's problems. When you are through college you will be in a position to earn your own living as teacher or in some other profession that will make you sufficiently independent financially to live away from home in a good, constructive young women's club, provided your parents still insist on preventing you from going about with other congenial young people

Household Hints

Common alum melted in an iron spoon over hot coals makes a very strong cement for metal and glass.

Stains on tinware or teacups can be removed by dipping a damp rag in common soda and rubbing briskly. Wash and wipe dry.

To keep windows clean, rub with a cloth slightly moistened with kerosene. Polish with a dry soft duster or chamois.

Bathing caps and other rubber goods can be kept fresh and new by giving them a "bath" in talcum powder, when dry, after use.

If silver is never washed with soap it will retain its lustre. Hold under hot water faucet and use unsoaped water, then polish with chamois skin.

Nancy Page Quilt Club -:- By FLORENCE LA GANKE

A DIRECTION LEAFLET that will aid in making the Alphabet Quilt will be sent free to any reader sending a stamped, addressed envelope to Nancy Page, Boston American. P. O. Box 185, Boston, Mass.

THE women in Nancy's neighborhood had formed a quilt club. Each week they met and appliqued a block in the series of alphabet blocks for the crib or small bed quilt.

When the pattern appeared in their newspaper each week there was great excitement. "I wondered what would be used for the letter 'A.' Or, "Isn't the pattern cunning this week! What colors are you going to use, Nancy, for this one?"

Nancy usually chose her colors according to her scrap bag. She was using bits of material left over from summer clothes.

She avoided harsh red or brilliant orange, keeping the colors more pastel-like and soft.

When she was in doubt as to the fast color of material she always washed it first, being she realized what havoc could be wrought by a piece of a material whose colors ran.

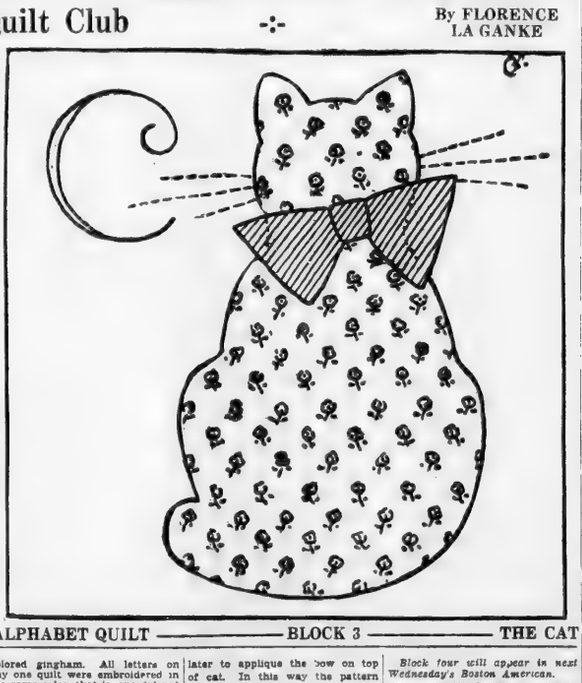
Joan's quilt was to be white with bands of soft green connecting the blocks. Martha was making a quilt with lavender connecting strips. Dorothy chose pale blue and Jennie had soft yellow. Christine used pink, and Charlotte considered a print in a small pattern for the connecting bands. But they all chose white for the body of the quilt and all patterns were appliqued on white blocks cut 6½ inches when finished, for a quarter-inch seam allowance was made on all sides.

The cat in Joan's quilt was buff with a blue bow. It might have been made of a figured print in buff or yellow with a bow of pink or blue. The first thing the club members did was to cut the square out of the paper. Over this they laid their square of white material and holding the two against a window pane they traced the outline of the letter and the cat with a sharp pencil.

When this was done they pasted the newspaper square onto a piece of light weight card board and tag board and dried it under pressure.

While they were waiting for the paste to dry they embroidered the initial C in the upper left hand corner.

Nancy used green fast color embroidery cotton. The color chosen for the initial depended upon the color chosen for the stripe of colored gingham. All letters on any one quilt were embroidered in the same color, that is, one did not see a green letter, a pink one, a yellow and a blue one on the same quilt.



ALPHABET QUILT — BLOCK 3 — THE CAT

In embroidering the letters the members learned that fine outline or chain stitch was best. They used four strands of cotton to make the letters heavy enough.

After the paper pattern was dry, the outlines of cat were cut. The pattern was laid on the cloth and one-quarter inch allowance for turning under on all sides was made.

The members learned that it was best to cut the cat in one piece and later to applique the bow on top of cat. In this way the pattern was not so apt to go askew.

After the cat was cut, then the bow was cut out of the pattern and laid on blue material. A quarter-inch allowance was made here also. Nancy put the cross piece of the bow on top of the bow itself.

The edges were basted down and the pieces were pressed. Then they were basted in place on the cloth over the pencilled outline and sewed down with fine, slanting, invisible hemming stitches.

Three blocks, the apple, the bird and the cat, were now ready. What would the fourth block be?

Block four will appear in next Wednesday's Boston American.

We Forge Our Own Chains

By LUCY LOWELL

WE, ourselves, forge the chains which bind us—and the instruments which strike off our shackles.

Constance Cameron

We ourselves, are the Sisters Three weaving the fabric of fate, each for himself, spinning good and evil, a thread at a time. A thread which, if it be often repeated, forms a pattern called character.

The threads—how monosequential they seem as they run through our fingers. A single thread so easily lost in the whole, so likely to turn into habit, strengthened and turned into pattern before we are aware what has happened!

Remember Rip Van Winkle in Jefferson's play—the drunken Rip who keeps excusing himself for each one lapse by saying, "I'll not count this time!"

Count it he may not, but the record of it is woven firmly into the pattern of his being; the threads multiply and each one makes it easier to form a new one, till at last the pattern is strong enough to break down resistance.

Thus Rip—and others like him—becomes a drunkard. The pattern in this case is weakness of character and this in turn forms numerous unprepossessing patterns of environment and circumstance.

But the threads we weave are not all sinister or the patterns disagreeable. Each hour of work, for example, becomes the pattern of achievement. Every constructive thought helps to form mental development. Every kindly, unselfish action works out a two-fold pattern of moral strength for ourselves and inspiration for others since the fabric we weave bears the shadows of the lines of others as well as that of our own life within itself.

Unusual Corn Dishes

ALTHOUGH Europeans cannot understand our American taste for corn, we still keep his "taste" for this familiar food, which can be prepared in so many different ways, that were it not for corn's distinctive taste it might not be recognized as the same vegetable.

Martha Lee

Corn is combined with pimentos and onion and peppers. It is baked or fried or sauteed. And with each successive recipe it seems as if such succulent sweetness could not be improved by any other combinations, but each time the unexpected comes true.

Here are some recipes which are new and which are delicious. Just try one and see if you haven't got a coming "corn" appetite. The first recipe is an excellent one for dinner.

CORN IN POTATO NESTS

Add 2 tbsps. of butter, ¼ tsp. of salt and ¼ tsp. pepper to 2 cups of hot, mashed potatoes and beat until fluffy. Add 2 well-beaten egg yolks and force through a pastry bag onto a greased pan in the form of nests. Brown in a hot oven. Remove from the pan with a spatula and fill with hot, well-seasoned canned corn. Serve with fried chicken.

BAKED STUFFED EGGS

Cut 8 hard-cooked eggs in half lengthwise and mash the yolks. Saute ½ cup of chopped mushrooms in 2 tbsps. of butter until tender and add to the yolks. Add 1 tsp. of salt, ⅛ tsp. of pepper, ½ tsp. of prepared mustard and 2 tbsps of cream, and refill the whites with the mixture. Place in a shallow buttered baking dish. Add ¼ cup of cream and pepper and salt to taste to can of corn and pour it around the eggs; cover with buttered crumbs and brown in a hot oven.

Faithfully yours,
MARTHA LEE.

Calling on Neighbors

By MRS. BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

If a person moves into a new neighborhood, is it proper for him to invite his new neighbor to call on him or should the neighbor make a voluntary call? S. H.

IF the neighbor has a fine, gracious, neighborly point of view, as we hope he or she has, he or she will call soon to welcome this new arrival in the neighborhood This visit of welcome into a new neighborhood is socially a very important and significant one, and one that should not be omitted.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

My daughter is about to announce her engagement and would like to do so by giving a dinner at our country club. In extending the invitations who should do the inviting, the parents or the daughter? The guests will mostly be her friends. MOTHER.

SUCH invitations should be sent in the names of the parents of the girl. They make the announcement and the fact that their names appear on the invitation stands for the sponsorship of the announcement. This is especially in this particular kind of announcement.

Little Seth was having supper one night with his neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. Smith.

After supper the cat came in and Mrs. Smith said: "Pat the cat, Sethie, and make friends with him."

Seth patted him and said: "Does he ever say anything for you?" Mrs. Smith said: "Why, no."

"Huh, Seth said, he's no good. Our cat laid six kittens the other day."

Debutantes to Be Honored at Many Parties Planned For Next Month

Miss Katharyn Watson and Miss Catherine Olney Presented to Society Today

THE DEBUTANTES ARE NOT to be quite so much on the go this coming month, judging from the calendar kept by Miss Mary O. Porter of River st. The Christmas holidays cause the festivities to cease from December 22 to December 26 inclusive. The first affair of the month is a dance which Miss M. L. Blake is giving in honor of Miss Elizabeth Blake, daughter of Mrs. Robert Parkman Blake of Waterhouse st., Cambridge, at the Women's Republican Club on December 2. The same evening, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Lindon Smith are entertaining for their daughter, Miss Lois Lindon Smith, at a dance. A tea and a dance are to take place on the 4th, the former, a tea for Miss Dorothea Newman, daughter of Mrs. Frederick W. Eaton, at which Mr. and Mrs. Eaton will be the hosts. The dance is to be at the Country Club in honor of Miss Carolyn Day, to be given by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Chester Day of Browns st., Brookline.

MR. AND MRS. HENRY S. GREW of Marlborough st. are presenting their daughter, Miss Ethel Grew, at a ball at the Hotel Somerset on December 6. The following day, Mr. and Mrs Harry Brewerton Duane will be "at home" at their Beacon st. residence. On the 9th, Dr. and Mrs. George H. Monks are introducing their daughter, Miss Olga Monks, at their house on Commonwealth ave. That same evening, Miss Betty Spalding will make her bow at the dance her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Eliot Spalding of Berkeley st., are having for her at the Women's Republican Club. The next day, Miss Elsie Brewer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Brewer of Marlborough st., is making her debut at a tea. That night, Miss Marjorie Evatt is "coming out" at a dance at the Algonquin Club, given in her honor by her mother and father, Mr. and Mrs Walter M. Evatt of Buckminster rd., Brookline.

MISS M. R. LANG IS HAVING a tea, December 11, for her niece, Miss Margaret Lang, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Lang of Bay State rd. The dinner-dance in the evening is for Miss Deborah Brown, whose parents are Mr. and Mrs. Howard W. Brown of Griggs rd., Brookline. On the following day's schedule is a tea and a dance. The tea is to be at the Commonwealth ave. residence of Mr. and Mrs. James M. Newell for their daughter, Miss Alice Newell. The dance is for Miss Elizabeth Lowe, given by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George H. Lowe, of Acorn st. On the 14th, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Stevenson is giving a tea at her home on Beacon st. for Miss Elizabeth Thomas. Another tea is being given at the same time, this in honor of Miss Phyllis Vose, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis E. Vose of Charles River sq.

THE CHILTON CLUB IS TO be the scene of Miss Miriam Dodge's formal bow on December 16, her parents, Mr. and Mrs Laurence P. Dodge, are to be the hosts. The 17th, Miss Anne Frothingham is to make her debut at a Somerset dance, her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Langdon Frothingham are the ones entertaining at this affair. The next day, Miss Elizabeth Hamlin will make her social bow at a Country Club dance given by her parent, George P. Hamlin of Mt. Vernon st. Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Crosby of Dean rd., Brookline, are formally presenting their daughter, Miss Caroline Crosby, at a tea at the Somerset, on December 19. In the evening a dinner-dance is being given by Mr. and Mrs. Edwin S. Webster for her niece, Miss Elizabeth deP. Hovey of Hammond st. The first of the only three luncheons so far scheduled is on the 21st, when Dr. and Mrs. Edwin Seaver of New Bedford will entertain at luncheon for their daughter, Miss Jinnet Seaver.

A LUNCHEON IS TO BE given December 27 by Mr. and Mrs. Winthrop L. Carter of Mt. Vernon st. for their daughter, Miss Katharine Carter. Two parties on the 28th conclude the affairs for December. They are a luncheon at the Hotel Somerset at which Mrs. Reeve Chipman of Brimmer st. is presenting two debutantes, her own daughter Miss Constance Chipman, and Miss Charlotte Stearns Smith daughter of Mrs. G. L. Smith of Millis, and a tea to take place in Mrs. H. Stanley Hyde's West Newton home, at which she will introduce her daughter, Miss Helena Hyde.

Miss Elizabeth Hovey Miss Elizabeth Wheeler

Miss Elizabeth Hovey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chandler Hovey, with Miss Elizabeth Wheeler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James W. Wheeler, also of Chestnut Hill. Miss Hovey is in charge of the pourers at Miss Katharyn Watson's tea this afternoon. (Staff photo.)

A TEA-DANCE WAS GIVEN in honor of Miss Katharyn Watson today by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lester Watson, at their home on Hammond st., Chestnut Hill. At 4 o'clock, in a black gown having silver sleeves, Mrs. Watson began receiving her guests and introducing them to her daughter, who was wearing a sleeveless, bright green taffeta with which she carried talisman roses. The dining room was under the supervision of Miss Elizabeth Hovey, and at the tea tables were Miss Anne Houghton, Miss Elsie Brewer, Miss Rebecca Hallowell, Miss Katharine Davis, Miss Elizabeth Wheeler, Miss Nancy Hallowell, Miss Hope Richardson, Miss Louise Kaine, Miss Edith Gray, Miss Anna Clark, Miss Ruth Lovering, and Miss Mary Ives. Miss Anna Howite of New York and Miss Grace Row of Cincinatti, house guests of Miss Watson's, also are pouring.

MR. AND MRS. RICHARD OLNEY of Fairfield st. are presenting their second daughter, Miss Catherine Olney, a provisional Junior League and Vincent Club member, at a dance at the Dedham Country and Polo Club this evening. It is to be quite an informal affair and therefore there are to be no ushers. Miss Nancy Olney made her debut at a Chilton Club dance two years ago. Miss Betty Way is a house guest of the Olneys.

EVERYONE WAS DELIGHTED with the concert which preceded the ball at the Somerset last evening. Mr. and Mrs. Donald McKay Frost of Exeter st., were hosts at a presentation party for their charming debutante daughter, Miss Mary Ryerson Frost. The gowns of mother and daughter were in perfect harmony as they received, the one in a soft green and gold brocade; the other in a white moire trimmed with green velvet flowers, the bouquet of pale yellow roses and greenish white orchids she carried blending also. Those of the elder set who chose to look on rather than dance sat not only in the chairs surrounding the ballroom, but also in the balcony, from whence they gazed at the charming young things in their gorgeous gowns.

IT WOULD SEEM THAT PASTEL blues and greens are very much a la mode; among those following this style were Mrs. Gardiner H. Fiske in a blue moire, Miss Rachel Warner and Miss Katharine Davis in green satins. Also wearing this color in a somewhat brighter shade was Mrs Quincy Shaw, Jr., in a stunning lace frock. Speaking of lace, Miss Agnes Murchie had on an unusual and striking gown of red lace, fashioned quite long and with a decollete back and tight-fitting sleeves to the wrist. Miss Alice Dalton, one of the loveliest debs of the season, was attired in white satin, as was also Miss Kathleen Chase. Miss Barbara Proctor had on a gown of russet red moire and red was also the color of Miss Anne Frothingham's evening dress. Miss Isabella Grandin, in gold; Miss Lorraine Lesson, in green and gold; Miss Polly Beale, in black velvet, and Miss Phyllis Elsworth, in bright green, were among those in attendance.

THE MILITARY WEDDING of Miss Dorothy Quincy Doggett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Bradlee Doggett of Commonwealth ave., and Lieut. Alfred Richardson Taylor, U. S. N., is taking place this evening at 7:30 in the Second Church of Boston, which is to be decorated with cedar and evergreen trees. A cousin, Mrs. Abbott B. Foster is to fill the roll of matron of honor while Miss Kathryn Crowell of New York is to be honor maid. Miss Mary Taylor, sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Lucia C. Gray of New York, Miss Priscilla Page and Miss Caroline Farnham are to be bridesmaids. They are to be attired in blue-green chiffon, with which they will carry spray bouquets of butterfly roses and snapdragons. The bride is wearing her mother's wedding dress of ivory satin, and her veil, a family heirloom, is of duchess lace with a coronet of rose point. Her bouquet is to be of white roses and valley lilies.

THOSE USHERING AT THE ceremony, which is to be performed by the Rev Eugene R. Shippen, are Lieut. Robert E Blick, U. S. N., Lieut. Vernon Rigler, U. S. N., Lieut. Stewart Lindsay, U. S. N., Lieut. Brownley Ammon, U. S. N., Lieut Schuyler N. Payne, U. S. N., and Lieut. Carleton H. Moore, U. S. N. Lieut. Kennith L. Forster is to be best man. The reception is to follow, at the Doggett residence. Miss Doggett, named after her grandmother, Dorothy Quincy, a namesake and niece of John Hancock's wife, attended the college of William and Mary in Virginia after being graduated from the Brimmer School. After January 1 Lieut. Taylor and his wife will be at home to their friends in Brooklyn, N. Y.

MR. AND MRS. LEOPOLD GRUENER (Margaret L. Collens), of Newton, are being congratulated upon the birth of a daughter, Cynthia Winsor Collens. Mr and Mrs. Gruener, who were married a year ago last February, lived in Cambridge last winter.

BILLBOARDS TO BE TOPIC OF FEDERATION

Billboards that deface the natural beauty along New England's highways will come in for more condemnation when the clubwomen of the state gather for a conference on conservation of natural resources Tuesday, Nov. 19.

James P. Taylor, secretary of the Vermont Chamber of Commerce, will speak on the billboard nuisance before this department of the state federation at the University Club in Trinity pl. during the morning session.

An unusually interesting program for the occasion has been prepared by Mrs. Daniel Goodridge, chairman. Mrs. Azel A. Packard, state president, and other federation officers will be present. Luncheon tickets should be ordered from Miss Elizabeth Hubbard at the State House, department of conservation, before Monday.

Two other conferences will occupy the attention of clubs during the week. That of the seventh and eighth districts will be held jointly on Monday in the Unitarian church in Winchester Center with the Winchester Fortnightly Club as hostess. Mrs. Nathaniel E. Smith, seventh district director opens the morning session at 10:30 and Mrs. Philip Tirrell of the eighth district has charge of the afternoon program, featured by speeches from Mrs. Arthur Devens Potter and State Federation officers.

The twelfth district will be entertained by the West Newton Women's Educational Club at the Unitarian Parish House in an all day conference next Friday. Mrs. Joseph A. Otis, hostess president and Mayo Childs will open the sessions and state federation officers will speak. A model meeting conducted by Juniors introduced by Mrs. Frank P. Bennett, Jr., will be a feature.

LEAGUE OF WOMEN VOTERS

The Foreign Affairs School, which has been an annual event under the auspices of the Massachusetts League of Women Voters since 1922, will be held this year at the Hotel Commander, Cambridge, on Jan. 21, 22 and 23. This school holds a unique place in connection with efforts of numerous organizations to arouse and inform the public in international affairs.

This year the league plans to tie up the program of the school with problems of contemporary interest, such as the Naval Disarmament Conference.

Another feature this year will be to commemorate the 10th anniversary of the formation of the League of Nations by producing in dramatic form a session of the league at Geneva. Mrs. Charles Peabody is chairman of the committee which meets on Nov. 20 to plan this production.

WOMEN IN COUNCIL

Percy A. Brigham will be the speaker on "New England Day" to be observed Friday, November 22, in Roxbury Masonic Temple. His lecture will be illustrated.

WOMAN'S REPUBLICAN CLUB

Prof. Andre Morize of Harvard will be the guest speaker on Tuesday at 2:30 p. m. His subject will be "Literary Life in Contemporary Paris." "Italian Night" will be observed the following evening at 8 o'clock at the clubhouse when special guests of Italian birth are to be entertained. Mrs. Joseph H. Soliday, chairman of Norfolk County, and Miss Margaret McGill are to be hostesses for the evening.

STATE HOUSE WOMEN'S CLUB

The monthly get-together meeting of the club will be held in Durgin Park Co. restaurant, Hayward pl., Monday at 6 p. m. New books will be discussed by Mrs. Lucinda F. Spofford of the Robbins Library, Arlington. Miss May F. Fillebrown of the department of civil service is chairman of the committee on arrangements.

COHASSETT WOMEN'S CLUB

At the monthly meeting Monday afternoon Mrs. Sheldon W. Ripley will present "The Littlest Rebel" and an exceptional musical program will be given by the glee club. Mrs. George W. Gomley, director of the second district, will be the honor guest.

ST. VINCENT'S GUILD

Mrs. Robert Trigg, president and Mrs. Thomas Hicks and Mrs. J. D. Sullivan of Brookline will be hostesses for the weekly bridge whist to be held Monday, Nov. 18 at the New Home, Guyette st., North Cambridge. Mrs. Martin Fannon chairman of the ways and means committee will assist. This Guild will sponsor a bridge whist party at the League House, Arlington st., Nov. 22 at 2:30 p. m. Mrs. James E. O'Connell of Milton and Mrs. James Sullivan of Belmont are in charge and invite all interested in helping the St. Vincent's new home to attend.

WEST MEDFORD WOMAN'S CLUB

The conservation committee, Mrs. W. S. Stanley, chairman, will have charge of the meeting in Community Hall on Monday at 2:30 p. m. "Conservation, what, how and why" will be discussed by L. Raymond Talbot.

Clever Use of Draperies, Flounces, Flares, and Godets Retains the Correct Silhouette in Dresses

(SKETCHED IN PARIS)

Irregular Trend of the Mode Is Feature of the Season

Paris Bureau of the Boston Evening American

PARIS, France, Nov. 16—Bowed but broken is the line applicable to and presented by the latest frocks for afternoon wear seen in fashionable resorts here during the week. Bows and knots are in ever so many instances the sole embellishments of dresses.

Draperies, flounces, flares, godets are introduced to add grace and fullness to the dress, but so cleverly are they used and manipulated that the svelte and tight-fitting line remains unbroken and retains the correct silhouette.

Bows, tabs and knots in the same fabric help to preserve the quiet air of distinction that pervades the modes of the moment When other trimming is employed, it is most unobtrusively used, and always in keeping with the design and color scheme.

Such a frock is the one shown today. It was sketched in the atelier of Cyber, and is a delightful example of the simple self-trimmed, perfectly cut frock that is so much in demand. It is of crepe satin, a fabric that lends itself admirably to the soft drapings and circular godets that are such a feature of this model.

(SKETCHED IN PARIS)

A SIMILAR treatment is used at the wrists, the little knotted ends being part of a triangular applique on the lower part of the sleeve. The lower part of the skirt is formed of circular godets and has an excessively uneven hemline, the point at the back almost touching the floor.

SHOWN, too, is one of the most successful models from Augustabernard. It has an unusually flattering line due to the bolero bodice and the slim long skirt with the graceful flare at the lower edge. The bolero is detached from the bodice and is clasped in front with a strass ornament.

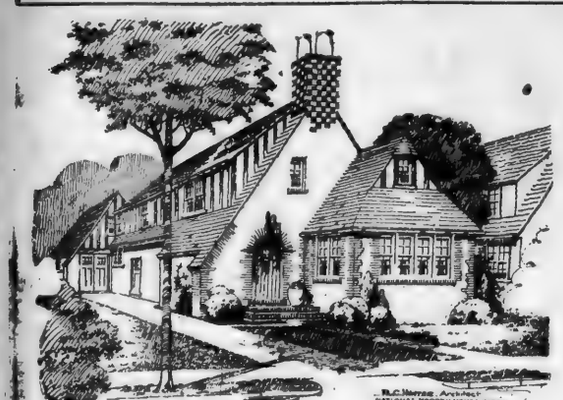
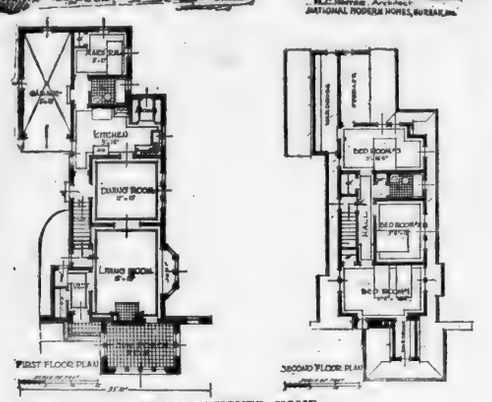
Home, Costing $11,500, for Narrow Lot



R. C. Herrick, Architect
NATIONAL MODERN HOMES BUREAU, Inc.



WELL DESIGNED HOME

By National Modern Homes Bureau, Inc.

THE good lines of this house (A-164), show what can be done on a narrow lot when the house is properly designed.

The "box" type house one associates with the narrow lot is not a necessity.

The arrangement of the floor plans shown herewith, will appeal to the housewife, the layout is complete, compact and livable and the attached garage is an added feature as also is the large wardrobe space over it.

A cellar extends under the main portion of the house.

The treatment of the chimney, the brick trim of the front and the entrance door, all add much to the artistic effect and but little to the cost.

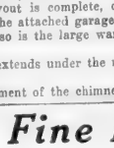
Cost about $11,500.

COMPLETE working plans and specifications of the house illustrated above may be obtained for a nominal cost from the National Modern Homes Bureau, Inc. Any Technical questions regarding this house will be answered without cost or obligation. Address the National Modern Homes Bureau, Real Estate Department, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston. Refer to House A-164.

The Fine Points in Homes of Today

By BETTY BONNELL

WITH more electrical conveniences being brought on the market in a never-ending stream, and with the modern housewife eagerly alert to adapt the newest ideas, it has become a necessity to have the modern home adequately supplied with electrical outlets in convenient spots.



Betty Bonnell

The use of multiple plugs and extension cords is a sure sign of old-fashioned equipment and the know of no woman who finds anything but displeasure in having these "doodads" littered all over her house.

As for lighting circuits, experts tell us that the home should have at least one outlet for every 50 sq. ft. of space in order to provide for proper illumination through the use of lamps and decorative shades. Wall switches have become most popular and I note a good many homes going in for three-way switches for such uses as upstairs and downstairs control of hall lights; switching lights off and on when entering a room by one door and leaving by the other; lighting the bedroom when entering the door and putting it out at the bedside; controlling the porch light indoors and outdoors and illuminating the open space between house and garage by control from both ends.

As for convenient outlets, one simply cannot have enough of them. There are two general kinds: those that serve for permanent connections, and others for temporary appliances.

Of the former kind, outlets are needed in the basement for the oil burner and electric water heater, if this operates by a separate attachment. You will require outlets for your laundry for the washer, mangle, ironing machine, etc. In the kitchen, there's the electric range, dish washer and ventilator to be taken care of, as well as provisions for three electrical cooking utensils in the breakfast nook.

The living room must have its outlet for the radio and possibly an electric piano and, of course, the bedrooms should have an ample number for a bed light, electric fan, violet-ray lamp or vibrator. Don't overlook the dining room which must have its quota of outlets for the percolator, waffle iron, etc. Then of necessity, a bathroom outlet for the radiant heater on fall and spring mornings.

You will note that some of these things I have mentioned are temporary appliances, and among these may also be included the vacuum sweeper, floor polisher, etc. In fact, the list of portable things is almost endless, counting such items as water heater, curling iron, smoothing iron, cookers, heaters, choppers, polishers, etc. All these require handy outlets.

LITERATURE on standard materials and products used in the construction of Modern Homes will be sent to you, if you will check the subjects that interest you and mail to the National Modern Homes Bureau, Inc., Real Estate Dept., Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston.

Single Home at Oak Hill Village Sold

The Oak Hill Company has sold to Sherwood S. Smith of Newton Center, the brick house at 69 Arnold rd., Oak Hill Village, Newton. The house is of Normandy farmhouse architecture from plans of Royal Barry Wills.

The outstanding features are the tower of white stucco and the roof of Ludovici Celodan clay tile which is a replica of an old Normandy roof. The lot has an area of 13,798 sq. ft. and is landscaped. The house is valued at $22,000.

Factory Building in Newton Lease

John T. Burns and Sons also report that they have leased in Newton at 39 Chapel st., the brick two-story factory building containing 40,000 sq. ft. of floor space. The Commonwealth Manufacturing Company of Gardner leased for a term of years to the Atlas Parlor Suite Co. of Waltham, who after making extensive alterations will occupy the premises for the manufacture and upholstering of furniture.

Jane Addams in Hospital

Chicago, Nov. 16—Miss Jane Addams, head of Hull House and internationally known social worker, was in a hospital suffering from a broken wrist.

Including Massachusetts and Greater Boston Churches

CHURCHES BUSY WITH LAYMEN IN PULPITS

This is Laymen's League Sunday in Unitarian churches.

This is also industrial relations Sunday with Protestant churches. In addition to these two interests many clergymen are talking about the problems raised by the tremendous excitement aroused at the grave of Father Power in Malden.

"MIRACLE GRAVE"

Rev. F. S. Bernauer will introduce the evening service at the First Free Baptist Church, Warren st., Roxbury, with a discussion of Divine healing and its relation to the "Miracle Grave" at the Holy Cross Cemetery. The sermon will be on the second coming of Christ. The service opens with a musical prelude at 7 p. m. by the organist, chorus choir and male quartet. At 10:30 a. m. the sermon will be on the "Omnipotent Father God."

OLD SOUTH FORUM

Hon. George Young, M. P., is to be the speaker tomorrow at the Old South Meeting House Forum in place of Prof. Robert Emmons Rogers. His subject will be "The British Program in Palestine." Traditional Yiddish music will be rendered by the Myrtle Jordan trio. Questions. Free.

MASON IN PULPIT

At the Wellington Community Church, Medford, tomorrow evening, Mr. Raymond H. Cowing, a prominent fraternalist and editor of the Eastern Star magazine, will deliver an address on "Opportunity." Mr. Cowing is a veteran of the World War, and is now a reserve officer in the U. S. A. and also a radio broadcaster. The pastor of this church, the Rev. Thomas T. Johnston, will preach as usual in the morning.

DR. BROOKS ON CURES

At the Dudley St. Baptist Church the morning session will deal with "Fancy or Farce?" Dr. Brooks has his own definite opinions and will give his ideas freely and frankly. A special musical program will add to the beauty of the service. Mr. Edward F. McGrady will address the Page class at 12:30.

St. Radegonde Guild at Special Meeting

A special meeting of the Guild of St. Radegonde will take place in the Boston College high school building, James st., Boston, on Monday, Nov. 18, at 8:15 p. m.

The meeting will be in charge of Rev. James F. Mellyn, S. J., spiritual director of the guild, and the special speaker will be Frederick A. Gillis, professor of psychology, Teachers' College, city of Boston, who will address the guild on the subject of "Development of Personality."

Boston "Y" Guests of Copley Methodist

A delegation of Y members will attend the Copley Methodist Church tomorrow to hear the Rev. William L. Stidger on "Prophetic Prayer and World Events." This will be an opening event for the "Week of Prayer" to be observed by the Christian Associations all over the country. Dr. Stidger has just returned from an extended trip to St. Louis and the South.

Union Ministers at Pilgrim Hall Monday

As one of the opening events of the industrial conference carried on among the churches this week will be the Monday morning gathering of all ministers of every denomination in Pilgrim Hall, 14 Beacon st. Among those booked to speak on "Industry and the Social Conscience" are Mr. John Calder, Mr. Herbert Stetson and Mr. Hubert Herring.

Red Cross Rollcall

A Red Cross roll call begins Monday. Among the many churches preparing to give a helping hand is the Dorchester Congregational Church, whose pastor is the Rev. George H. Driver, who is chairman of churches of the Boston chapter. He has secured the Revs Allbright of Brighton, Bissell of Dorchester, Rutledge of Dedham, McClelland of South Boston and Tyler of Brookline to act for their centers.

Lay Sunday

One of the youngest lay preachers to occupy a Unitarian pulpit tomorrow is Edward W. Lapworth, a Boston University graduate, 1927, and a business man of this city. He is a member of the Meeting House parish, Dorchester, and will preach on Friendship in the Unitarian Church of Berlin, Mass. This is the third time he has filled a pulpit on lay Sunday.

Tomorrow throughout the country is the annual Laymen's day in Unitarian churches. Young men and men who have a message to deliver become preachers for the morning service. In and about Boston a score or more of citizens engaged in various professions from professorships to business brokers are scheduled. A few will appear in their own churches while many others have been assigned to churches far removed from their homes.

Percy W. Gardner of Providence, president of the Unitarian Laymen's League, will preach Sunday in the West Side Church in New York city. Walter Prichard Eaton goes to Pittsfield, Mass. Prof. Tenney L. Davis of Massachusetts Institute of Tecnology will speak on "Some Things Which Are Immaterial," in the church at Norwell. Henry R. Scott of Boston gives the address at Uxbridge and Frederick H. Hunter in his own church at West Roxbury.

Ernest Cuba will talk on "Personal Impressions of Present-Day France" in Dr. Albert C. Dieffenbach's pulpit at Newton Center. Edward Dana of New Bedford, president of the board of commerce of that city, will give an address at the New Bedford church.

Ford Hall First to Follow Calvert Lead

Next Tuesday evening the Ford Hall Forum people will conduct what appears to be a follow up of the inspirational seminar held last Tuesday and Wednesday in the Harvard Fogg Museum by the Calvert Round Table, where Catholics, Jews and Protestants met for frank discussion of their different views. At Ford Hall, the Rev Michael J. Ahern, S. J. Rabbi Harry Levi, and the Rev. William L. Stidger will all talk on "Questioning our Religious Prejudices." This is announced as the "first laboratory meeting."

Fr. Ahern

A series of pertinent questions have been formulated to be answered so far as possible by the speakers and by others present. There are queries for Catholics Protestants and Jews. The outcome of such study as Ford Hall has entered into will, it is hoped, be a better understanding and a better feeling between three great faiths here in Massachusetts and Boston. All interested are cordially invited.

Religion in Industry

Rev. Harold Marshall — Mr. Hubert C. Herring — Mr. James Myers — Mr. Edward F. McGrady

Four of the men who will deliver addresses in connection with the annual conference on industrial relations conducted by the Greater Boston Federation of Churches. These men are all zealous for the welfare of New England, and for her increasing good name as a section of the country where working conditions are just, where employers are broad minded, and where labor is known for its high quality, its efficiency and its wise leadership.

RELIGION AND INDUSTRY CONFER

An outstanding speaker in the coming industrial conference to be conducted Sunday, Monday and Tuesday of this week by the Greater Boston Federation of Churches will be the presence of Mr. Edward F. McGrady, personal representative of President William Green of the American Federation of Labor. Mr. McGrady is about to go South to unionize the textile mills. Not long ago he was kidnaped out of a southern mill town with threats. He is going to address the Page class of 150 men at the Dudley Street Baptist Church tomorrow noon. On Monday he will address the Monday club of social workers at the Y. W. C. A. and will address the mass meeting that evening at the Old South Meeting House. The other evening speaker will be Spencer Miller, Jr., consultant on industrial relations for the National Council of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

Other speakers who are authorities in some phases of industrial development will occupy many Boston pulpits tomorrow. Men's classes and church schools will also be addressed. Programs and information may be had at federation headquarters, 4 Park st. Haymarket 0923.

Churches Resolves Against Prejudice

The Greater Boston Federation of Churches board of directors at their regular monthly meeting last Tuesday passed a resolution in favor of justice and equal opportunity in Boston and New England for minority races against whom discrimination is practiced. This resolution was especially aimed at certain hotels where illegal rules keep certain citizens from equal rights with others. In conclusion the resolve states: "That we urge our churches and members of churches, lay and ministerial, to take such action as they can most effectively, and to exercise their influence to secure equal opportunity and equal service in all public places for all persons, regardless of race or color.

Dr. Jump Speaks on "Scientific View"

At the Union Congregational Church on Columbus ave. tomorrow morning the Rev. Herbert Jump will preach on "Modern Man and the Old Testament Wonder Tales." His theme has been suggested by miracles purported to have been wrought at the grave of Father Power in Malden. Much interest has been expressed to learn what science has to say in the face of such phenomena, and a large attendance is expected at the Union church. All are welcome.

Family and Court, by Henry McKenna

Mr. Henry McKenna, chief probation officer of the Superior Court, will address an audience at Boston College high school, James st., Tuesday evening on "The Family Before the Court." This is the seventh lecture in a course on social service problems conducted by the Catholic Charitable Bureau. Next Tuesday Dr. Warren A. Stearns, State commissioner of corrections, will talk on "The State and the Criminal."

Infant Saviour Guild in Old English Fair

An event announced as "something entirely new" will be an old English fair to be held at the Copley-Plaza Hotel next Wednesday from 10 a. m. to 6 p. m. A supper will follow the fair. One unique feature will be a reproduction of the Old Curiosity Shop, with Little Nell and her grandfather. What is believed to be the largest bridge and whist in the history of the guild starts at 2:30.

"Sin" No More Used Says Newton Pastor

Tomorrow morning the Rev Ivan Shade Franklin will take for his sermon theme "A Lost Word 'Sin'." In the evening he will tell the romantic story of a Japanese boy who came to New England 60 years ago and then went back to Japan as a Christian missionary.

Commonweal Editor to Address Audience

Michael Williams, editor of the Commonweal, will be the second lecturer in a course at the Convent of the Sacred Heart, 785 Center st., Newton. His talk tomorrow will begin at 8 p. m. Mr. Williams' subject is "Adventures in Journalism."

THAT'S MY CHURCH

Do you see that building there,
Yes, the white one on the square,
Standing tall and straight and fair?
That's my church!

I love to hear the bell
And the message it doth tell
Of a faith that doth impel,
That's my church!

The people are not cold,
And though the church is old
It's spirit is quite bold,
For a church

By the Rev. Vaughan Dabney, minister of the Second Church, Dorchester, and president of the Massachusetts Federation of Churches.

Common Cause

There has been no waning of interest in the Common Cause Forum in Franklin Hall, Berkeley st., which had its opening last Sunday evening. A season's program is promised with interesting speakers on a wide variety of subjects. Tomorrow evening Mr. Edward W. Joyce of Newton will talk on "America at the Crossroads." The speaker will present a survey of conditions which President Hoover declared recently to be threatening the moral status of Americans.

CARDINAL PRESIDES

His Eminence Cardinal O'Connell presided this week over the Catholic bishops of the United States, who held their annual meeting in Washington, D. C. With the Cardinal was the Rt. Rev. Mgr. M. J. Splaine, D. D., I. P. P., of St. Mary's Church, Brookline. There were at the gathering two cardinals, four archbishops and 55 bishops. A present of $50,000 was voted for Pius XI in recognition of the 50th year since the head of the Catholic church entered the priesthood. The money will be used from all parts of the United States. A suggestion was made that this money be used for the fitting and the equipping of a special library room in the Vatican. There were also other suggestions.

COMMONWEAL, 'PROPAGANDA,' BY WILLIAMS

This Catholic magazine, printed in New York city and a regular visitor at the Church Editor's desk of the Boston Evening American, is a broad-minded magazine, looking at the world from a generous editorial standpoint. While it stresses Catholic matters, as is natural, it talks without apparent prejudice or animosity about politics, people and places.

The latest issue has an illuminating article on "Aspects of Publicity" by the editor, Michael Williams, who says among other things:

"Speaking from a journalistic experience of many years, which has touched many aspects of publicity and propaganda, I confidently assert that the current tendency to think of all propaganda activities as necessarily sinister, and all lobbying as inherently a bad thing, and publicity agents as objectionable creatures per se, is stupid and wrong. A great deal of the most sincere and, in intention at least, the most beneficial work on behalf of the common good is being done by organizations created to carry on propaganda, to effect publicity and to bring about pressure on politicians; in other words, to lobby."

Fred Marvin Loses to Mme. Schwimmer

A suit brought by Mme. Rosika Schwimmer against Mr. Fred Marvin in which she alleged that he called her a German spy and a Bolshevist agent has been decided in her favor after three appeals. Mr. Marvin has now paid Mme. Schwimmer $17,000, according to information service of the Federal Council of Churches. Its bulletin says further: "The case is significant because much of the misleading and mischievous propaganda against the churches collegia, social agencies and individuals engaged in promoting international peace, appears to have had a common source in the Hearst publications.

"Recently the work of W. B. Shearer has furnished a similar example of unfounded propaganda."

Sing Songs in African Language

"The Far Flung Battle Line of Christianity," is the title of a sermon to be preached tomorrow morning by the Rev George H Driver in his Village Dorchester church. In the evening the Rev Alfred E Leroy will tell of his Zulu mission. Miss Ruth Dart, born of missionary parents in Africa, will sing some native Ovumbundy songs.

FLIERS TAKE UP FOOTBALL

By GEORGE HAMBLIN

There is a certain secret going on at the airport that no one can fathom. And that secret is that Skyways, Inc., have a football team, and have played one game so far, but have not released the lineup of their eleven.

So far as we know, and we know plenty of the doings at the airport, this is the first football team ever made up of flying boys over on the mud flats of Jefferies Point, and also the first athletic organization which has gone into action in behalf of the airport.

The holder of the trans-continental air records, both east bound and west bound, Frank M. Hawks, popped up unexpectedly at the Boston Municipal Airport in his race winning Lockheed Vega.

Of course, the gang, or what was left of them on a rainy day, gathered around the Lockheed, inspecting the record breaking ship.

Colonial Air Transport succeeded in getting the morning trips up from Newark, both the mail and passenger plane, but the morning plane from Boston to New York, took three hours and some minutes to fight its way to the Newark airport.

During the afternoon the weather broke and the regular flight of both passenger ships, and mail plane were carried out on schedule.

An Army Consolidated PT gave the boys something to laugh at its into the day when it gained about 1000 feet of altitude and proceeded to stand still, according to official observers, like Leo Barber and Paul Herman, the ship stood absolutely still for five minutes at a time.

Danny Duggan, he who is arranging the airport fun at the Ellis Hotel next Monday evening, declared that he could take Charlie Tockl's OXX-6 motored Travel Air up and kept it standing still until the cows come home.

Economics Club Dance Tonight

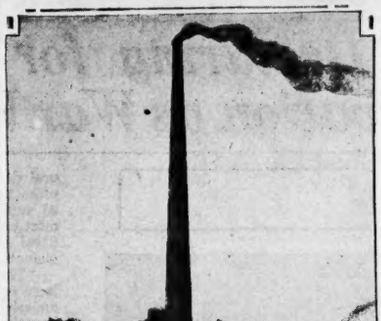
Old Boston in Pictures---No. 109



The old chemical works in Roxbury were located on the line of the Boston & Providence Railroad. The chimney of the works rose 220 feet in the air and was one of the highest in the city in 1853, when this sketch was drawn. The plant manufactured vitriol and other acids. More Old Boston pictures will be printed in the Boston Evening American.

Champ Cornhusker Repeats Triumph

Platte City, Mo., Nov. 16—Trained to the point of near perfection, Walter Olson, 32-year-old blonde Viking from the prairies of Illinois, pegged and hooked his way to his second consecutive national corn husking championship.

Olson's time, 31 of Woodhill Ill., who defeated Olson in a 1929 Illinois contest, was eclipsed by the fast-moving lithe 1928 and 1929 national winner. Holmes finished second, husking 24.74 bushels of corn in 80 minutes as compared with 26.2 bushels husked by Olson, thrown into an accompanying wagon by the cornfield king.

Flier Loses License for Dropping Bills

New Bedford, Nov. 16—Capt. George A Parker, registrar of motor vehicles, has ordered the license of Harry T. Olden, local aviator, suspended for a five-day period.

This action was taken when Olden was hired by the local post of the American Legion to drop posters announcing the legion ball, Armistice Day, according to the announcement of the suspension from the office of Capt. Parker. Olden was warned by registry officials that dropping any sort of articles from an airplane, except on private premises permanently reserved for the purpose, is forbidden by law.

DINE AND DANCE
WHERE YOU GET GOOD FOOD, MUSIC, VAUDEVILLE AND DANCING

Duke Davis and Band Prove Attraction

Henry "Duke" Davis and his Silver Slipper orchestra are still going strong at this restaurant. Henry claims the honor of being the most versatile orchestra leader in Boston. He is an accomplished player of ten different instruments and his orchestra are well known to the radio fans of New England being among the pioneer broadcasting orchestras in the East and many of these fans are dropping in at the Silver Slipper Restaurant to hear Davis and his orchestra. Plans are being made for a warm welcome for Holy Cross-Harvard fans this evening and a tremendous gathering is expected. Manager Scazzini promises a pleasant surprise for his patrons next week with something special in entertainment which, according to reports, will meet the approval of all who witness it.

Henry Davis

Prominent Dancer at Cocoanut Grove

Miss Edith Sheldon, recognized as one of the most outstanding dansetue in the theater today, and who has had prominent roles in popular musical comedies, is appearing at The Cocoanut Grove, Boston's fashionable eating place, for an indefinite period.

Miss Sheldon is the daughter of a former officer in the government service. She was born in Manila. Before she was 12 years of age she had crossed the Pacific seven times. She has been on the stage four years.

She made her stage debut right here in the Hub with one of John Murray Anderson's musical units and during her four years of stage experience, she enjoyed lead dance roles in such musical comedies as "Cherry Blossoms," "Honeymoon Lane," and "The New Moon."

Special Dinner for Football Followers

S. Ferro, manager of the Frascati Kenmore Restaurant announces a special dinner for the football fans to be served before or after the game. This feature was adopted at the request of the sporting patrons of this restaurant. Music is furnished by Morey Kimble and his orchestra. Many favorable comments have been made by guest of the beautiful decorations that help make this one of the prettiest restaurants in the city. This restaurant is widely known for prompt service and delicious food.

Football Night at the Cotton Club

Nat Clark, manager of the Cotton Club at 45 Lansdowne st. announces that there will be a special celebration after the Holy Cross and Harvard football game tonight. He has a lot of pleasant surprises in store for all who attend this affair.

Sandy and his all-colored Cotton Club Band furnish the music with a large dance floor for those who like to dance.

There is an all-colored review featuring Anita Bush direct from the Cotton Club, New York. The club can be used for banquets afternoons bridge parties or any other social function with a choice of several different menus that please

Stella Offers Fine Bill for Patrons

There is no denying the fact that The Stella is recognized as a bright spot of Boston's night life.

This new and beautifully appointed dine and dance restaurant, located in the heart of the Hub's theatrical district, offers the very best in service, food, and entertainment.

The music is furnished by none other than Perley Breed and his group of recording and broadcasting syncopators. Billy Payne serves admirably as master of ceremonies, and his nimble wit has caught on with the patrons.

There are two excellent shows staged nightly, 7:15 and 11:15.

3 Hurt Seriously as Mine Roof Falls

Bluefield, W. Va., Nov. 16 (INS)—Three miners were injured, two seriously, when a section of the roof in the Maybeury mines of the Pocahontas Fuel Company collapsed today. Ed Hodges, foreman, suffered a broken back; Elijah Smith, negro brakeman, has a skull fracture, and Willie Mitchell was injured internally.

President Disconcerts Diplomats by Declaring for Freedom of Seas and Against Starvation as War Weapon

THE diplomatic world is still rubbing its eyes and wondering if it read aright the Armistice Day remarks of President Hoover on the freedom of the seas.

It is true that, most of the time since the American Government was founded, the freedom of the seas has been the central point of our foreign policy.

It is true that we went to war four times on behalf of this principle: our war with the Barbary pirates, our war with France in 1793, our war with England in 1812 and our war with Germany in 1917.

It is true that President Wilson, near the end of the last war, included the freedom of the seas in his famous Fourteen Points that were to form the basis of peace.

But the world knows that Wilson then proceeded to conveniently forget all about this particular one of his fourteen points. Freedom of the seas evaporated along with self-determination of peoples and other high principles which the American President took into conference with Lloyd George, Clemenceau and Orlando.

* * *

NOW President Hoover revives the ancient American contention in a most appealing form:

"For many years, and born of a poignant personal experience, I have held that food ships should be made free of interference in times of war. I would place all vessels, laden solely with food supplies, on the same footing as hospital ships. THE TIME HAS COME WHEN WE SHOULD REMOVE STARVATION OF WOMEN AND CHILDREN FROM THE WEAPONS OF WARFARE.

"The protection of food movements in time of war would constitute a most important contribution to the rights of all parties, whether neutral or belligerent, AND WOULD GREATLY TEND TOWARD LESSENING THE PRESSURE FOR NAVAL STRENGTH."

Why would it "lessen the pressure for naval strength?"

President Hoover makes it clear:

"The rapid growth of industrial civilization in the past half century has created in many countries populations far in excess of their domestic food supplies and thus steadily weakened their natural defences. As a consequence, protection for overseas or imported supplies has been one of the most impelling causes of increasing naval armaments and military appliances.

"The world must sooner or later recognize this as one of the underlying causes of its armed situation, BUT FAR BEYOND THIS, STARVATION SHOULD BE REJECTED AMONG THE WEAPONS OF WARFARE."

* * *

THE London Daily Telegraph calls the President's proposal "revolutionary." It is revolutionary because, violating the language of diplomacy, it talks about something REAL.

It is revolutionary because in effect it asks England to renounce her long asserted "right" to control the seas for the purpose of starving any enemy nation into submission to England's power and will.

How honest and sincere is British statesmanship?

For years it has been demanding that the British food supply be made safe in future war time, by abolition of the submarine, which is the only answer of a nation threatened with starvation by Britain's superior sea power.

Is Britain ready likewise to abandon ITS tried and tested method of applying starvation?

When MacDonald came over to see Herbert Hoover, he started something.

Good luck to him, over there, in his task of seeing it through!

REVOLUTIONARY BUT REAL!

Parents' Week

As Suggested by Mr. J. A. Di Pesa

THE suggestion is made—by gentlemen connected with the publicity department of the theater—that the time has come to designate and celebrate a Parents' Week.

The week of Thanksgiving will not be complete, the press agents say, unless Father and Mother are invited to go at least once to the playhouse, in the company of their children. As Mr. Joseph Di Pesa sees it:

"Our children rush off for their evening relaxation with friends and sweethearts and leave their parents to find their own amusement. Why not take them with you occasionally? When the child goes off to the theater with the boy or girl friend, why not take the parents with them? There, together, they can enjoy a good laugh or, perhaps, cry. The mutual release of emotion is a wonderful thing for sympathetic understanding.

"For that reason, I am suggesting the institution of a Parents' Week, with the fervent hope that it may become a national occasion. With the approach of Thanksgiving Day there is a concerted return of children to their homes for family reunions. Why will not the week starting Sunday, November 24th, be a good time for our children to take their parents out of the home for an evening together in the theater? It is hoped this will become a yearly custom."

Mr. Di Pesa is a poetic soul, but we understand his message and are in hearty sympathy with it. It is his belief that more people should go to more theaters more frequently.

The "catch" to Parents' Week, and fathers know well enough that there IS a catch, is that in nine cases out of ten Paterfamilias will buy the tickets.

But never mind, an evening in the theater is an evening well spent whenever the theater offers anything worth while. Now, as seldom before, the American public needs such entertainment and relaxation as are to be found only in the playhouse.

The nub of the matter is that the theatrical season is on and that there are good "shows" in town.

The BAER Facts

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

DINNERS in diplomatic Washington seem to be a series of New England boiled snubs.

No diplomat is welcome unless accompanied by a gentleman.

The series of autographed insults is now in its second and more deadly stage.

The Van Snubbingers gave a delightful fracas in the sunken gardens of the Smithsonian Institute.

The only reason the guest of honor lasted the entire dinner was because his chair was equipped with a gyroscopic stabilizer.

The invitations sent out for the Van Snubbinger delicatessen skirmish read:

"You are cordially invited to duck your bread in the international consomme this evening. Bring along a ventriloquist's dummy so that you will have some one to talk to."

"We are seating you between a certified lobbyist and his sister-in-law by a previous divorce."

"This will be a dry dinner. Especially the courtesy."

"We trust that a pleasant time will be had by nobody."

"Answer this telegram, and, if possible, make it a cablegram."

We attended the delightful contest. The ladies were wearing eyebrows made of the fur of Kilkenny cats.

There was no hand shaking. It's dangerous to lead with your right at a Washington dinner.

Mrs. Van Snubbinger was so delighted to see us that her bridgework blew a golden fuse, her shoulderblades opened and closed like Japanese fans and her asthma came back.

The Van Snubbinger butler contested my seat just to make me feel like one of the mob.

A very charming affair. A platter of bicarb tablets were served with the appetizers.

The guest list read like the title page of who's hooted.

While the dinner cost the Van Snubbingers heavily they made it up on the hat-checking privilege.

A smile would have been a fillbuster at that affair.

H. G. Wells Writes on

"The Science of Life"

In Collaboration With

Prof. Julian Huxley and Geo. P. Wells

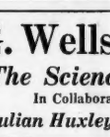
THE way out of the stomach, the opening to the duodenum, is called pylorus (the gateway). It is guarded by a powerful ring of muscle which normally keeps the exit closed. The pyloric muscle is a sentinel, and will not allow food to enter the intestine before it has been adequately treated in the stomach.



H. G. Wells

The small intestine is a tube about an inch across and some 20 feet long which forms an intricate coiling mass in the abdomen. The whole tube is very uniform in its minute structure, but physiologically it is possible to distinguish between the first half where the digestive process is completed and the second half where food is absorbed into the blood.

Some four inches from the pyloric opening there opens into the intestine a narrow tube; this tube has two branches coming from important digestive glands, the liver and the pancreas, to carry the juices made by these glands into the intestine. Each has essentially the same structure as a salivary gland, but they are larger and more complicated.

The liver is by far the larger of the two organs. Everyone knows its shape and position. It secretes a greenish fluid called bile, which trickles slowly down a tube, the bile duct, into the small intestine.

If a meal is being digested, the bile runs straight down to the intestine; if not, it is stored until required in a hollow sac, the gall-bladder, which lies at the end of a side-branch of the bile duct.

The pancreas (the sweetbread properly so called of domestic animals, though other glandular matter is frequently dished up under this name) is a smaller gland, pink, about eight inches long, having an irregular elongated shape, and lying in a horizontal plane behind the stomach. It secretes a colorless pancreatic juice which flows directly along the pancreatic duct to the intestine.

There is yet another supply of ferments. The intestine, like the stomach, has in its wall an enormous number of minute, simple glands, whose tubules open into the intestinal canal. These glands make the intestinal juice, or success entericus, a fluid which plays a part of the utmost importance in the digestive process.

These various juices act, not only on the food, but also on one another. The presence of bile makes the enzymes in the pancreatic juice more active and the success entericus converts inactive "enzymeprecursors" in that juice into active enzymes.

It is quite possible for a man to adapt himself to live without a stomach, but his small intestine is essential. Proteins, or rather the shattered results of the gastric digestion of these substances, are attacked by two enzymes, trypsin and erepsin, contributed by the pancreas and intestinal wall.

Trypsin specializes more in the earlier and middle stages of protein dissection, while erepsin is concerned with the splitting of the penultimate products.

Between the two, the protein molecules are completely taken apart into their constituent amino-acids. Carbonhydrates also have all been reduced to assimilable glucose.

Fats are fallen upon by certain substances present in bile, the so-called bile salts, which overcome their stubborn tendency to form large droplets and disperse them into a state of minute division, called an emulsion. (In physical language the bile salts lower the fat's surface tension.)

When this has been done the fats are readily assailed by steapsin, an enzyme made by the pancreas, which splits them up into their last stage of fatty acids and glycerine. Thus for all the main classes of organic foodstuffs is the process of digestion completed.

But besides the various enzymes there is another important substance in this region, contributed by the pancreas. The enzymes just mentioned will not work in an acid medium; therefore, the acidity of the chyme has to be neutralized before their operations can be performed. This is done by the alkaline carbonate of soda.

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

FEW men's hearts are so airtight that they cannot be worked loose with a little soft-soap.

It's a wise woman who can tell when the motor of a man's imagination is "picking up" and knows the exact psychological moment to take her foot off the starter.

You are probably getting toward the sear-and-yellow if you can remember when every girl had a "best beau" who called on Sunday evening; but you are not actually an "antique" unless you can remember when everybody exclaimed "How fortunate!" when a girl got married and "How shocking!" when she got a divorce.

Before marriage, a girl wraps herself around a man's neck with a strangle-hold; but, after marriage, she is sometimes lucky if she can retain even a remote control of his FEET.

The modern woman seldom falls head-over-heels in love. "Head-over-heart—and keep your equilibrium!" is her slogan.

A woman may forgive a man for raving over another woman, who is a brilliant genius or a professional beauty; but nothing so insults her vanity, as to have him fall for some commonplace little thing, who is no younger nor prettier than SHE is.

There's something about a be-ribboned church aisle that looks pain fully "straight and narrow" to a carefree bachelor.

A nagging wife or a critical husband is like a cinder in the eye: you are always astonished after they have been removed, to discover that such a little thing could have caused you so much pain.

It is not when a lover dies, but when love dies, that a woman suffers her greatest tragedy.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. M'INTYRE

NEW YORK, Nov. 16—Chinatown is only a shell of former opulence, but remains the most carefully policed section of New York. Time after time when Chinatown's tong fires seemed extinguished, they were found to be only smouldering.

Hatchet men and their allies with sawed off shot guns would suddenly swarm from mysterious passageway and the crooked gray streets would run red. Then the carnage would dry up and disappear like a rain drop on a parched desert.

Even the most adroit "stool pigeons" have never been able to tip off an impending battle. One minute Chinatown seemed to nod in dreamy escape from reality and the next it would ring with crescendo shouts of victors mingled with the groans of vanquished.

Before the reserves arrived from the Elizabeth street station around the corner, Chinatown is revealing its sullen indifference and sleepy blink. Nine patrolmen and six plain clothes men are roaming the streets of the quarter every hour of the day and night.

In addition there are 16 special detectives, changed frequently, and a squad of narcotic sleuths detailed there at all times. The Chinese Merchants Association, which actually governs the district, also has a quota of carefully selected informers.

Nearly all the gambling houses, opium dens and brothels which were a part of old Chinatown have moved to New Jersey. On Sunday former residents return to promenade and discuss news of their native land. What is left of Chinatown is supported by yap wagon tourists.

There are professional cicerones who give sing song lectures in the joss house and there are underground passages where "prop" drug addicts lie in bunks feigning poppy addiction. But only when a tong war blazes, is there excitement in Mott, Doyers or Pell street any more.

Tong men are not considered outlaws by the Chinese. A tong is a commercial organization. Business enterprises are dominated by them and a Chinaman must be identified with a tong or he cannot get a job.

Chinatown is about the only place left with a "Practical Tinsmith." Many of the frame and shuttered dwellings are old timers with rain spouts and gutters. Most of them are occupied by white wives of Chinese and are mausoleums of lost hope.

An explanation of why so many business men are always "in conference" may be gleaned from the fact there are more than 30,000 acres of ground in the New York area given over to golf clubs.

Theatrical folk are writing to newspapers and otherwise resenting the Broadway manner of referring to performers as "hams." It is only a passing term that will wear itself out and is not applied venomously but jangly.

Some of the touchy should open newspaper columnists' morning mail and see what they are called. Yet they continue merry, bright and full of red ants.

A high kick dancing academy for ladies on Eighth ave. has this sign in a street window: "Gentlemen Will Not Look in Here." And I'll be dogged if I didn't have to climb upon a fire plug to see over the crowd.

Actors are turning to plastic surgery along with ladies of the stage. Before his long illness Raymond Hitchcock had a tuck taken in his face. Harry Richman had his nose bobbed and Georgie Price had his ears clipped. Such gestures in vanity for those whose livelihood depends largely on personal appearance seem not out of place. But what are they going to do for old feet?

From an anonymous correspondent: "We hear much about incomes of syndicate writers. You, for instance, are reported receiving several different amounts. Come on, now, what's the low down?"

What's the use? We have all lied so much nobody will believe us anyway.

Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

HOW strange! Thus after twenty years
To find the spot you left with fears
So vague, and hopes so vast is still
The same low cottage on the hill,
Set in a little, sleepy street
Where, long ago, your eager feet
Rebellious, traced to and fro
Till time would free you, let you go

The city, that had promised all!
Swift change on change has made your life
A thing of peace, a thing of strife,
A checkerboard of joy and pain,
Of sickening loss and grateful gain.
In many lands your lot was cast
And, now that twenty years are past,
Most strange of all to see once more
The same slant shadow on the door,
To pass, while Time, your jester, mocks,
